200 IN COUNTY FACING EARLY CALL TO ARMY

Two-Thirds of 300 Sent To Columbus Pass Physicals, Boards Informed.

MOST IN 28 AGE GROUP

Notices Will Be Sent Those To Be Re-Classified, Officials Say.

Approximately two-thirds of the 300 young men from Richland county who this week went to Fort Hayes, Columbus, for Army physical examinations will remain in 1-A classification, subject to early call for service, according to information received today by two of the three local draft boards.

Most of the 300 are between the ages of 28 and 35 — the group previously classified as 1-H and deferred due to being over 28.

Word was received today on results of the examinations of the groups, numbering approximately 100 each, which went to Fort Hayes Monday and Tuesday. The third group was in Columbus today. Of one group of 107, there were 74 accepted for immediate service and these remained in 1-A classification. They returned to Mansfield and are expected to be called to service shortly.

Of this same group of 107, four were disqualified for service and classified as 4-F. Fourteen were listed as 1-B, which means they have a defect which can be remedied. When this defect is corrected they will be placed in 1-A. The other 15 in the group were returned for further check.

Draft board officials said that those who went to Fort Hayes for examination may assume they passed the exam and remain in 1-A unless they receive word to the contrary. Notices will be sent within several days to those who are being re-classified for one reason or another.

Members of the group who went to Columbus may learn the results of their examination by checking their draft board.

Meanwhile, national selective service headquarters announced in Washington that the new system of inducting recruits the same day they receive their physical exam-

Anti-Aircraft Guns Bark, Searchlights Sweep Sky As Unidentified Plane Circles Over Los Angeles Area

BULLETIN

LOS ANGELES—(INS)—Nine minutes after the all clear signal at dawn ended a near five-hour Southern California blackout, a new alert was flashed in the Los Angeles area at 10:30 a. m. (EWT). The warning was flashed by the fourth army interceptor command.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES — Anti-aircraft guns, fighter planes and huge searchlights were thrown into action for the first time on the United States mainland early today when an unidentified plane roared over Los Angeles and surrounding cities.

The barrage kept up intermittently from 3:10 a. m. (PST) until about 5:30, as the plane circled vital defense areas.

Two hours after the unidentified craft was sighted police received the report that a plane had crashed in flames in the southern section of the city.

Reports that two other planes were shot down were also being investigated by police.

The unidentified ship was believed to have dropped no bombs during its flight, but police received several reports of a terrific explosion in the residential district at 43rd street and Western avenue.

Army officials refused to reveal whether United States planes had been sent out to bag the strange ship.

It was learned, however, that when air raid sirens sounded at 2:27 a. m., navy and army pilots stationed at air bases throughout the district warmed up their ships and stood by for further orders.

Center of the action seemed to be over the Long Beach district, although anti-aircraft units at San Pedro, Huntington Park

United Nations Aircraft Raids Macassar Area

Three Large Enemy Transports, Other Vessels Sunk; Planes Bombed In Attack on Sumatra Airport; Bali Fight Continues.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The war department announced today that seven American pursuit planes intercepted a formation of nine Japanese bombers protected by 14 fighting planes over Java, turning back the enemy craft and shooting down one Japanese bomber and one fighter plane.

(By International News Service)

BATAVIA—Japanese attempts to assemble a new invasion fleet for an all-out onslaught against the island of Java met with a new setback today.

Three large enemy transports and several other unidentified vessels were sunk by United Nations aircraft in a lightning raid on a fleet concentration off Macassar in the island of Celebes.

The new sinkings occurred in the Straits of Macassar, where a few weeks ago the Japanese lost an estimated 60 out of a fleet of 100 naval vessels in the first major victory for the United Nations since the enemy turned its attention toward vital Java.

United Nations aircraft also heavily raided a Japanese-occupied airport near Palembang on the island of Sumatra west of Java and at the same time devastated a Dutch oil center nearby. Three Japanese planes were bombed and set afire during the airport attack.

(Editor's Note—Despite continued offensive action by Dutch and American planes based on Java, an official Dutch spokesman in London warned today that the situation is "dangerous." The Japanese, he pointed out, are in possession of footholds north and east of Java from which Dutch air bases and the great Soerabaja naval base can be assaulted. A large number of United Nations aircraft is desperately needed, he said, if the scales are to be turned before Japanese forces, now dispersed, can be concentrated for an all-out attack on N. E. I. key points.)

The first of the three large enemy transports to go down in the Macassar straits during this morning's action foundered under the impact of a bomb load droped by a single United Nations plane.

Dutch and American fliers under general command of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, supreme United Nations commander in the southwest Pacific, are taking every advantage of the present comparative lull in Japanese offensive operations.

The enemy is obviously having difficulty in Sumatra and fighting apparently is still under way on the island of Bali. Consensus was that the anticipated Japanese attack on Java—except for sporadic air raids at various points—is hanging fire.

Manhandling of their expeditionary fleet by Dutch and American air and naval units was held responsible and the enemy's efforts to organize and consolidate another armada are being consistently harassed.

While the Japanese air raids on Java continued, observers at Bandung, N. E. I. high command headquarters, expressed surprise that the enemy had not bombed Batavia harbor until Tuesday, giving the United Nations time to disperse most of the shipping to other more isolated points.

3 IN COURT AS SCHOOL SCRAP FLARES ANEW

Butler, Worthington Township Trio Pleads Innocent To Assault Charges.

The Butler school dispute flared anew today when three Butler men, including a Worthington twonship trustee and a former member of the county board of education, were brought into Mansfield municipal court on assault and battery charges which grew out of the alleged beating of two Butler board members nearly three weeks ago.

Cited on the assault charges were Clarence G. Tugend, 39, former county school board member; Archie Stevens, 39, Worthington township trustee, and his brother, Raymond Stevens, 31.

The three men pleaded innocent before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch and their hearings were set for the morning of March 4 in Municipal court. They were released under $500 bond.

The charges were filed in municipal court last night by Kinsey Morgan and Rupert Roberts, members of the Butler school board, who allegedly were pulled from an automobile and beaten the morning of Feb. 6 when the Butler pupils went on strike in protest against the suspension of Willard S. Weekley, superintendent of the school.

Filing of the charges was the first indication that Morgan and Roberts knew the identity of their alleged assailants. Neither of the board members was injured seriously during the affray that marked the beginning of a two-day strike of pupils.

Morgan said today that he de-

Rescuers Bring Survivors To Shore In Two Latest Nazi Torpedoings.

WASHINGTON —(U P)— The Norwegian freighter Blink has been torpedoed by an enemy submarine off the Atlantic coast, the navy announced today.

(By International News Service)

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—A probable death toll of 16 was counted today in the torpedoing of two tankers off the Atlantic coast in the intensified attacks launched by German submarines.

Eleven of 41 men on board appeared to have met their death when an enemy U-boat sent three torpdoes crashing into the tanker Cities Service Empire which sank in flames. This was disclosed when 30 survivors were landed at Fort Pierce, Fla.

Earlier, the navy revealed that the American-owned tanker Republic of Houston, Tex., had been torpedoed, bringing death to five on board. Twenty-eight were rescued and brought ashore.

The bodies of seven men, including Capt. William J. Jerman, 28, of Upper Darby, Pa., were recovered from the torpedoing of the Cities Service Empire. Four others were missing and they were believed to have drowned or burned to death when an oil bunker exploded and sent flaming oil the entire length of the ship on the starboard side and for hun-

ROAD SCRAPER KILLS FARMER

Heavy Machine Falls Over on Driver In Accident on Loudonville Roadside.

Crushed by a road scraper which broke loose while it was parked and fell on him, Frederick Hoffer, 53, a Lakeville farmer, died at 5:30 today in Mansfield General hospital.

Hoffer received rib fractures, a broken pelvis and internal injuries when the heavy machine toppled over on him four miles east of Loudonville on State Route 39, at 5:45 p. m. yesterday.

He and Richard Jeffries, Lakeville R. D. 1, had been delivering two road scrapers from Marion to Sugar Creek at the time of the accident.

Jeffries said this morning that they had driven the machines from Marion. Hoffer stopped the scraper he was driving east of Loudonville.

Jeffries followed him off the road and said he saw Hoffer set the machine's brake and dismount from the rear.

"He was facing me when it happened," Jeffries said, "and before I could yell the machine suddenly broke loose, so that the scraper blade felled him from the rear. The machine came to rest in the

MAYOR HAS 3 DAYS LEFT TO NAME DIRECTOR

Locke Says He 'Supposes' He Will Act Within 'A Day or So' In Controversy.

Mayor W. J. Locke today had only three more days in which to do his shopping for a new service-safety director, if he sticks to his stand that Director C. M. Crafton will be through on Feb. 28.

But the mayor said today he hadn't chosen a new director—although he said he "supposed" he would do so within "a day or so."

Meanwhile, Crafton was in his office, continuing to handle city affairs, still maintaining that he hadn't resigned, that Locke hadn't notified him he would be through on Feb. 28 and that he intended to be on the job until he received such notification.

The status of the Locke-Crafton stalemate was apparently unchanged today.

Asked again—it's a routine question now—if he had given Crafton any formal notice that his services would terminate on Feb. 28, Locke replied: "No, I haven't."

As for Crafton, he was satisfied to "let the matter rest" where it is.

If Locke should succeed in getting Crafton out of office by Feb. 28, he would then be confronted with the necessity of making an appointment and letting the new appointee find out about the operation of the job by himself, unless Crafton could be persuaded to stay on to "break in" his successor.

The mayor said yesterday he hadn't given any thought to that phase of the problem.

CONFER TODAY

Union, Ashland Tire Officials Plan Strike Parley.

ASHLAND—Executive board of local 196, United Rubber workers was scheduled to meet this afternoon to consider the Faultless Rubber company's proposal for the re-instatement of a worker discharged Feb. 4 and which led to a strike yesterday of 300 plant production workers.

Walter Reuer, president of the local, said he believed that an agreement would be reached today and that pickets, which have guarded plant entrances for the past two days would return to work tomorrow.

Union officials said they had authorized the strike in protest to the discharge of Harold Stafford, an employe with 19 years service. The company charged Stafford with "negligence."

The company is working on a limited number of defense orders. No disorders have resulted during the walkout.

Freak Two-Inch Snow In County; City Has Sprinkle

A freak storm that covered Bellville and most of the southern half of the county with nearly two inches of snow early today while the ground was bare in Mansfield brought state and county highway equipment into service south of the city.

The snow ended abruptly a short distance south of the Mansfield city limits, County Engineer Howard Sword said. It was not heavy enough to plow, but cinder trucks were pressed into service on the hills and curves in the Bellville and Lexington areas.

Deputy Sheriff Glenn Freeman, who lives in Bellville, said the snow fell between 11:30 p. m. yesterday and 6 a. m. today.

"As I came to work this morning I noticed that the snow ended just outside Mansfield. It looked as if someone had swept the highway from a point beyond the city limits," he said.

A trace of snow fell in Mansfield between 9 and 10 a. m. today, but it melted almost as rapidly as it fell. The temperature was down to 19 this morning and moved up to 24 at noon.

The weatherman predicted more snow flurries and continued cold weather this afternoon and tonight.

FEAR 700 LOST

Jewish Refugees Aboard Ship Sunk By Explosion.

LONDON —(INS)— Seven hundred Jewish refugees were feared lost today following an explosion that sank the Panamanian steamer Struma in the Black sea, according to a Reuters dispatch from Istanbul.

The explosion apparently was caused when the ship hit a stray mine. A Turkish vessel, the steamer Tohankaya, was reported sunk in the same locality.

There were no reports of any survivors. The dispatch said the Struma, commanded by a Bulgarian captain and manned by a Bulgarian crew, was torn to pieces by the blast and sank within a few seconds. It was being towed by a tugboat five miles above the Bosphorus when the explosion occurred.

O. S. R. Fugitive Captured While Hiding In Trunk

George R. Primm, 24, who escaped from Ohio State Reformatory here on Oct. 3, 1940, was captured yesterday in Phoenix, Ariz., according to wire dispatches received from that city today.

Primm was captured by officers as he attempted to hide in a trunk at the home of relatives in Phoenix. The escapee evaded capture during a two-week search over the country, once fleeing police in a spray of pistol bullets.

His captors said he had a bullet wound in his foot which he refused to explain, but said it was inflicted by police.

Reformatory records show that Grimm was sentenced from Summit county in October, 1939, to serve 10 to 25 years for robbery. Superintendent Arthur H. Glattke said arrangements would be made to send for Grimm and return him to the reformatory upon receipt of official notification that he is in custody.

Richland Allotted 100 Cars For Sale In 3-Month Period

Richland county is allotted 100 new passenger automobiles for sale in the three-month period starting March 2 as its share of the 8,216 cars released today for sale in the state during that period by the Office of Price Administration.

Best indication of how the rationing of automobiles will affect motorists of Mansfield and the rest of the county is given by a study of new car sales for 1941. During the same period—March, April, and May—of last year, 1,410 new passenger cars were sold in the county.

The Ohio allotment is part of a national quota of 145,500 new 1942 automobiles of which 25,500 will be placed in state and national reserves. In addition to the 8,218 allotted the state, a reserve of 668 is provided to adjust county quotas.

Other county quotas included: Ashland 44; Crawford 48; Erie 51; Holmes 14; Knox 45; and Morrow 16.

Persons eligible to purchase the cars include farmers without others means to transport produce and supplies; physicians, nurses and clergymen; fire, police and other safety officials; mail carriers; taxi operators; executives and workers in vital industries; salesmen handling essential supplies, and state and local officials in vital services.

The autos released are 43 per

ALERT: MacArthur's Troops Strike at Japs During 'Calm'

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops have struck back at the Japanese forces in a series of "uniformly successful" attacks which broke three days of calm on the Batan jungle battlefront in the Philippines, a war department communique said today.

Today's war department communique indicated that MacArthur, alert against any Japanese surprise, had sent out patrols through the Batan brush in an effort to learn the reason for the calm that had descended upon the front since Sunday.

"There were sharp encounters between our patrols and the enemy all along the line in Batan," the communique said, referring to MacArthur's main line of defenses stretching about 13 miles across Batan Peninsula from the vicinity of Bagao on the China Sea to Pilar on Manila Bay.

"Small elements of our troops were uniformly successful in aggressive local actions," it was stated.

That meant that MacArthur's little army, although outnumbered at least 10 to one with reinforcements constantly pouring into the Japanese lines, remained a compact, well-organized force able to lash back at the enemy's lines.

VICTORY: Reds Crush Nazi's 16th Field Army, Killing 12,000

(By Associated Press)

Russia proclaimed a smashing new victory over Adolf Hitler's battered invasion armies today even as the fuehrer announced that the bitter snows of winter were melting and that he had completed preparations for the "final struggle" this spring.

"Snow and frost brought to a temporary standstill the series of victories of the German army, unique in history," Hitler declared in a message to Nazi party followers.

"Our enemy then hoped to inflict on the German army the fate of the Napoleonic defeat. This attempt has collapsed miserably."

In Moscow, Russians celebrated a communique reporting that the triumphant Red armies had crushed Germany's 16th field army, shattering three divisions and killing 12,000 troops in the Staraya Russa sector, 140 miles below Leningrad.

Staraya Russa had been a key German base guarding the southern flank of the Nazi armies before Leningrad. A decisive breakthrough by the Russians would gravely endanger the whole northern arm of the German invasion and presumably force a hurried withdrawal of the Nazi forces around Leningrad.

Soviet front-line dispatches also reported important new Russian gains during the past 48 hours on the southwest front —presumably between Orel and Kharkov, in the Ukraine—with the slaughter of 2,250 Nazis.

Hitler asserted that the coming spring struggle would be a settling up with that conspiracy

New Jap Push Waited In Burma

BULLETIN

RANGOON —(INS)— A curfew law was placed in effect in Rangoon tonight and a special military commander appointed to prevent looting and arson.

MANDALAY, Burma—(AP)—A new Japanese push into the Shan states of northeastern Burma was anticipated here today, as British troops to the south fought a delaying action from "good positions", along the west bank of the Sittang river, last natural barrier before the Rangoon railway which connects with the Burma road.

Rangoon, principal seaport of Burma and the capital, was semi-deserted following the completion of a compulsory evacuation of all but military elements.

A United States military mission supervised the hurried loading of hundreds of trucks with piled stores of lend-lease war supplies and rushed them off toward the Chinese frontier while the Burma road remained open to traffic.

It was understood that stores which could not be moved in time would be destroyed. In this category, it was believed, were many new U. S.-built trucks which had not yet been assembled.

British and American volunteer pilots who yesterday worked continuously up and down the highways back of the Sittang river front reported that Japanese troops were as thick as ants and could hardly be missed by the Allied bombing and machine gun attacks.

Japs Press For Rangoon Capture

LONDON — (AP) — Japanese troops threw themselves against the British line along the Sittang river in Burma without a let-up today despite increasingly heavy losses, military commentators here said.

The Sittang, which is the last natural obstacle of any site between the Japanese and Rangoon, is 400 yards wide at this season.

Some observers predicted that if the Japanese crossed the river in force Rangoon would fall in less time than Singapore did.

The Sittang river front is about 60 miles from Rangoon.

It was said that if Japanese were not able to bring pontoons up to cross the Sittang as they did Johore Strait in the assault on Singapore, they could obtain small boats which abound in villages along the river.

If the invaders once crossed the Sittang, it would be almost impossible to prevent them from cutting the railway and the main road and thus securing a grip on Burma's chief overland communications artery. While Rangoon holds out, traffic along the Irrawaddy river to the west probably would not be disturbed.

But it is at Rangoon that the main Japanese thrust probably will be directed, leaving upper Burma to be mopped up later.

The British in Burma have one advtange over the defenders of Singapore—the combined forces of the RAF and the American Volunteer Group have inflicted heavy losses on the Japanese air force.

Rangoon, however, is not well adapted to stand a siege. On the land side there is no strong natural defense line, and the Japanese would be able to spread across the country from the Pegu river, which is only 15 to 20 yards wide, west to the Hlaing, another small stream which empties into the Gulf of Martaban at Rangoon.

Canberra Reveals New Guinea Raid

CANBERRA, Australia—(INS)—A new Japanese air raid on Port Moresby, New Guinea, was announced officially at Canberra today.

The communique said the attack occurred at noon and that bombs were dropped but gave no further details.

Braving heavy anti-aircraft fire and a force of Japanese fighter airplanes, Australian bombers raided Japanese shipping and airfields at Rabaul, on New Britain, it was announced.

A "brisk battle" between the Australian raiders and the Japanese took place, and one enemy fighter was shot down with two others "probably destroyed," the communique said.

One Australian plane was lost and three members of the crew of another were slightly wounded, it was said.

Villagers Save 43 In Destroyer Wreck

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — (AP)—Forty-three survivors of the United States Destroyer Truxton and the U. S. naval supply ship Pollux owed their lives today to the hardihood of men, women and children from the village of St. Lawrence who rigged up a bosun's chair in defiance of the storm that smashed the ships, and pulled the seamen to safety over a 200-foot cliff.

The survivors were hospitalized at a U. S. naval base across the bay from the place where the vessels were wrecked with the loss of at least 189 men.

The story of the rescue was the first report of the number of men saved. Yesterday's announcement from Washington merely estimated the number of casualties.

Word that the two ships were in distress brought the villagers of St. Lawrence to the scene from across three miles of snow-covered wind-swept hills.

They found a cluster of men clinging to a cliff and began hauling them to the top with the bosun's chair, a rough wooden seat slung from a rope.

Other rescuers attempted to save some in the surf by a dory lowered from the top of the cliff but the little boat was swamped. Its crew was saved.

A third U. S. ship struck the shore in the same storm which wrecked the destroyer and supply ship, but floated clear and reached harbor.

which was hatched in the banking houses of the plutocrats and extended to the vaults of the Kremlin."

This was the Hitler who boasted last Oct. 3 that the Russian army "already is broken and will never rise again"; who blamed the weather for subsequent reverses, and declared that 1942 "will again be a year of great victories."

Bern dispatches said Russia's scorched earth policy, labor shortage and the flight of thousands of potential workers before the German army had crippled attempts to gear the economy of occupied Soviet areas to that of the reich.

Belligerent capitals placed varying lights upon the explosion of a bomb in Ankara, the capital of non-belligerent Turkey, on a boulevard only about 18 yards from the strolling German ambassador, Franz von Papen, and his wife. The man who carried the bomb was killed.

An Ankara dispatch to Reuters, British news agency, declared, however, that papers bearing the stamp of the German embassy had been found in the clothing of the victim. Von Papen and his wife were not injured.

Cite War Needs In Commons Debate

LONDON — Cheered by the house of commons, Leslie Hore-Belisha, a former war secretary declared today that he welcomed Prime Minister Churchill's revised government but that "it must stand or fall by the manner in which it meets the needs of this war."

He and other members speaking in the second day or war debate in the house declared three big needs were:

1—That the army be given control over its own supoprting aircraft, instead of the RAF.

2—That an immediate "generous" gesture be made to India, and that the British colonial policy be revised.

3—That the government take drastic steps to obtain a maximum of production and a minimum of civilian consumption.

Hore-Belisha, war secretary in the Chamberlain government at the outset of the war, declared thtat inadequacy of air support for the army and navy had been a constant factor in British reverses.

Another, he asserted, was underestimating the enemy.

He told the house that Britain was presumed to have reached parity with Germany in plane production, but that "neither the army nor the navy has the types required."

"The navy," he said, "lacks land-based torpedo bombers . . . There is no divebomber . . . There is no airplane armed with cannon sufficiently powerful to explode tanks.

"There is inadequacy of machines of the kind to carry parachute troops, and not enough transport carrying planes . . . and gliders."

roadside ditch but before it did Hoffer was pinned under the front wheels."

Jeffries jumped from his machine, started the motor of the scraper and after driving it free of Hoffer, picked the injured man up and pulled him to the side of the road.

Seconds later an automobile driven by Edward Ritchie of Ashville approached and after Ritchie had been flagged the two men rushed Hoffer to Mansfield.

Both Hoffer and Jeffries were farmers and drove the machinery as a favor for J. C. Crow, a salesman for the Huber Road Machinery company of Marion, Jeffries said.

Surviving are four sisters, Mrs. William Snyder of Loudonville, Mrs. Verne Fisher of Bellville, Mrs. Burle Lentz of Warren and Mrs. Ann Smetzer of Ashland, and one brother, Irvin of near Loudonville.

and Downey saw intense action.

Anti-aircraft guns at Fort MacArthur joined in the barrage and the concussion awakened the few remaining residents in the vast area who had not already been aroused from sleep by the wail of raid sirens.

The rumbling of the guns, shells bursting in and around the plane overhead and dropping of flares to further illuminate the target was seen by thousands of excited residents.

Amid the excitement of the moment reports varied on the number of planes overhead. It was generally believed that only one ship was overhead.

Army and navy officials made no comment on the air battle at any time during the spectacular activity.

Numerous reports on fifth column activities filtered into police headquarters.

Los Angeles police reported that three Japanese were arrested along the waterfront. They were booked for investigation by the FBI.

They were picked up in a district where previously it had been reported that unidentified persons were flashing signals to either ships at sea or planes overhead.

Mysterious alternate green and white light flashes from the La Brea hills sections also were reported, giving added weight to the popular belief that enemy agents were active in the area.

L. E. MacDonald, record bureau clerk at the West Los Angeles police station, said he clearly saw the plane when it was spotted by searchlights.

"I was standing in front of the police station," he said. "As I watched the searchlights, anti-aircraft fire broke out. I saw a plane that seemed to be up at least 20,000 feet. It looked like a butterfly."

Concussion of the shells was felt in downtown Los Angeles and flashes from the guns could be seen for many miles away.

The fourth army interceptor command at San Francisco called the blackout in the Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and San Joaquin valley regions four hours after Southern California was ordered on the "alert," indicating that possible enemy planes were approaching.

Shortly after the plane was sighted over Los Angeles, San Diego was blacked out. The action, however, apparently was confined solely to the Los Angeles area, according to first reports from coastal cities.

Richland Allotted 100 Cars For Sale In 3-Month Period

cent of the 340,000 to be sold to essential users in the next 12 months and 30 per cent of the total supply of 480,000 in the hands of manufacturers, distributors and dealers when the motor car industry closed for conversion to war production.

The remaining cars will be rationed in 1943 and thereafter.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson said a large portion of the total supply would be released in the first year because storage is expensive and the facilities are needed for other purposes.

The rapid release also will help "cushion the terrible impact of the sudden stoppage of automobile production upon automobile dealers and others who derive their incomes from retail sales of automobiles," Henderson asserted.

The car rationing in Mansfield will be handled by the local tire board, comprised of James Bailey, chairman, Fred B. Wolff, and Harold D. Burns. Bailey said today instructions concerning rationing of cars have not yet been received, but are expected Monday.

The board at present holds regular sessions daily from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room, but probably will extend the time for hearing applications when allotting of cars starts. Bailey, a retired business man, is at the office daily from 11 a. m. until closing, and the other two—Burns is an attorney and Wolff a hotel proprietor—generally are at the office from 2 p. m. until 5.

To date the tire board has apportioned six new cars — those which were sold prior to Jan. 1, but on which delivery had not been made. These have been frozen on dealers' sales floors along with unsold new cars. Bailey said he is awaiting receipt of blanks to permit sale of approximately 20 other cars falling in the same classification.

Approximately 200 new cars have been frozen on Mansfield auto dealers' sales floors since sale was prohibited.

Bailey, who is county tire coordinator as well as local board chairman, today received word that Richland county's tire quota for March is 66 passenger car tires, 55 passenger car tubes, 176 truck and bus tires and 194 truck and bus tubes. Also included in the county's ration is 63 truck and bus retreads.

Bailey has been attempting to obtain larger quotas of truck and bus tires because, he told state rationing officials, the shortage has hit trucking lines, bus companies, and industrial firms.

Richland county's quotas to date for passenger car tires, passenger car tubes, truck and bus tires, and truck and bus tubes, respectively were: in January, 51, 41, 99, and 119; February—49, 41, 79, and 137.

Bailey said he would meet tomorrow with the county tire advisory board to allocate the county quota to the eight rationing boards in the county.

Other county tire quotas for March, listed in this order—passenger car tires, passenger car tubes, truck and bus tires, retreads, and tubes, are as follows:

Ashland—29, 24, 77, 33, and 87; Crawford—32, 27, 94, 40, and 106; Erie—34, 28, 125, 54, and 140; Holmes—9, 8, 38, 16, and 43; Knox—29, 24, 79, 34, and 89; Morrow—11, 9, 41, 18, and 46.

URGE AID FOR RETAIL DEALERS

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1942.

One of the ways to "keep democracy from dying" is to give China all possible help.

Now that the billions of dollars have been appropriated, and the speeches made, let's get ready to turn the dollars into munitions and the words into works.

Congressmen Repeal Pension Grab

THERE will be no "pensions for congressmen"—at least not until that issue has been brought out into the open and discussed before it is again acted upon.

The house of representatives late yesterday followed last week's senate action and voted, 389 to 7, to repeal the "pensions for congressmen" section of a law passed several weeks ago under "unanimous consent" procedure which required no vote.

In few instances has the real intent of "government of the people, by the people and for the people" been better exemplified than in the quick about face of senators and congressmen in the matter of voting themselves retirement pensions.

Possibly never before had an act of congress drawn such a unified and heated expression of public disapproval, from one end of the country to the other, as did this pause, in time of war, to pass a law setting up a pension plan for elective government officials.

Considered in dollars and cents, the pension outlay for senators and congressmen would have been a small matter, as compared to the total of non-military waste of public money in recent years, but it happened to be that final straw on the back of the overburdened camel, and, for once at least, the public was heard.

It was something like this, also, in the case of Mayris Chaney, the dancer whom Mrs. Roosevelt eased into a $4,600 a year job in the Office of Civilian Defense—it was not the $4,600 that counted greatly in the midst of wasted billions, but it was one tangible thing that millions of people could see, and point to in expressing disapproval of squandering public money that is badly needed just now in paying for war materials.

For successful conduct of the war it is necessary that there be confidence in national leadership—military, executive and legislative—and action by the people's representatives in Washington should be such as to inspire confidence, not create suspicion.

Deferment for Labor Leaders

AMONG things that will need explaining, as people reach the point of giving it more thought, is the ruling from selective service headquarters in Washington that a "labor leader" may be deferred in the draft.

In explanation, it was said that, for the purposes of the order, a labor leader would be defined as one "in a position to carry on operations of value to the nation's interests."

Information is given that this action followed efforts of CIO and A. F. of L. officers to gain exemption for "leaders," and it is stated that a person serving in such capacity must prove to the satisfaction of his draft board that his job is necessary to "expedite the successful prosecution of the war."

Based on observations of the past year, with recollection of the extent to which jurisdictional and other sorts of strikes hampered the national defense effort, largely through what may be fairly termed "labor leadership," it may appear that successful prosecution of the war is much more dependent on whole-hearted co-operation of actual workers in industries than on the non-workers who are classified as "leaders."

In the selective service draft, with its call of young men to compulsory military duty, it is highly important to avoid anything that savors of favoritism, or exemptions due to influence, and the thought cannot be avoided, in this instance, that anything like blanket deferments for otherwise eligible men who can qualify as "labor leaders," will not meet approval by men who may be called from positions that involve actual productive work.

War Time Is Minor Inconvenience

MOVING clocks and watches ahead an hour, as a war-time measure, has been quite generally accepted as one of the minor inconveniences which the commander in chief of American military forces has decided will save electric power needed for production of war materials.

Nobody seems to like it, and a number of readjustments have been necessary in adapting daily routine to the changed time schedule.

Except for farm groups, however, there has been an attitude of acceptance, probably on the theory that if this will help, even in a small way, in winning the war, it will be worth while.

Michigan recently toyed with the idea of setting the state back to Central standard time, so that War time would be the former Eastern time, and, under farm pressure, the legislature passed a bill to that effect. Detroit, however, refused to go along with the idea and the governor finally vetoed the measure.

Now some Ohio farm groups have petitioned Governor Bricker to ask the legislature to put this state back on Central standard time, contending that livestock must be handled on the basis of sun time, which is about an hour and a half behind War time in this area.

If the war brings to the people of Ohio no greater hardship than that of adapting farm duties to actual hours of daylight rather than to the location of hands on clocks and watches this will be indeed a fortunate state.

White Canes for the Blind

USE of a white cane, to indicate blindness, is a practice that is becoming quite general in American cities and it is gratifying to note that the Mansfield Lions club has taken the initiative in distributing these distinguishing canes to blind persons in Mansfield.

Carefulness in giving a blind person the right of way is a common trait of motorists and pedestrians, and it needs only the identification provided by a white cane to assure caution by drivers and helpfulness on the part of others at street intersections or at any time aid or direction may be needed.

Selection of aid to the blind as one of their civic activities reflects credit on members of the local Lions club and the humanitarian principles of their organization.

Pacific Mandates Troublesome

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — One of the very worst features of the Versailles treaty, has been the "mandates." It was under a "mandate" that Japan took over the Marshall and Caroline islands, and many others in the Pacific.

It is around those islands that her fleet is supposed to be, say the arm chair strategists. It would seem to be the logical place for it—right on the flank of the normal route from the United States to Australia, which line is south of these islands, and to the Philippines.

It is assumed that Japan has turned the islands, which extend for considerably more than 1,000 miles east and west, and nearly 800 miles north and south, into a nest of naval and air bases. No white men have been permitted on the islands for more than fifteen years.

"You can count on the fingers of one hand the white men who have been on any one of those islands in the years since Japan took them over," a prominent diplomat here said.

CONTRAST this with Palestine, which Britain took over as a mandate, and was a headache until the outbreak of the present war. Or with the former German colonies in Africa, where the chief complaints were from British citizens that they had no rights, much less privilege.

Which leads us to wonder where the notion of a "mandate" came from, and what it is all about.

The notion of a "mandate" originated in the clever minds of some of the negotiators at the Versailles conference. It was a concession to one of the famous fourteen points of Woodrow Wilson. The particular point in question grew out of his "Peace Without Victory" slogan, which was so irritating to the Allies, much as it may have appealed to the Germans. In fact the Germans always have claimed that they laid down their arms in the armistice on the basis of the fourteen points, and then were betrayed.

FIRST the notion was that the territory to be taken from Germany, particularly the colonies (Alsace and Lorraine did not figure because they had been taken from France by Germany in the Franco-Prussian war, 1870) should be administered by the League of Nations. But it was decided to delegate this function to certain individual countries.

Then the colonies were divided up very much as they would have been in an old-fashioned conquest, except that Japan was given much more than any military or naval effort she had made warranted. She probably got this fat slice for two reasons, if one may look behind the record. One was that the Anglo-Japanese alliance was then in existence, and Britain was doing pretty much as she pleased with the Versailles terms. The other was that most nations were getting a little fed up with taking on any more of the "white man's burden."

But Japan really went to town with her mandates. She built up secret naval and air bases. Britain, really responsible for the situation, turned around and administered her mandates just as though she were merely their trustee, and not their conqueror.

About all of which every one except the Axis high command is very grateful at the moment.

Man About Manhattan

Back Numbers

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—A dusty but absorbing aspect of life in Sixth avenue are the countless, nameless second hand book shops that go in for back numbers of old magazines. There are at least seven such establishments in the space of four squares, and in them you will find as varied a cross section of humanity as Manhattan offers. Rabbis, soldiers, clerks, reporters and students are everywhere browsing through the departments that are labeled "Fiction," "Sex," "History," "Philosophy," "Religion," etc.

While I was there a man came in and asked for a copy of Burr McIntosh's monthly, a theatrical magazine that was famous at the turn of the century. He wanted the July issue for 1906, and got it. The price he paid was 50 cents. On its cover was a picture of Marie Tempest. Inside was a full "action" portrait of the great pianist Arthur Rubenstein. In those days Rubenstein was a gawky, frightened looking youth with a mop of frizzly hair shooting out from his forehead. But, even then, he could play that piano.

MOST of these shops have magazines that go back a century. There were Harper's Weekly for 1850 and Leslie's Weekly of the same period. What do they cost? It depends on the issue; some are 40 cents, others are $2.

These magazines are in many languages from all over the world, and they are conned constantly by art students, and research workers, especially those interested in the history of early photography, or the early dance, or the early anything.

I gather from the proprietors who, for some reason are reticent souls who do not like to talk, that the magazines are where the real money is made, though their shelves are lined with thousands of second hand books, mostly trash. If you take the time to go through these busily, and don't mind the dust, you can find, however, an interesting assortment of titles. For instance, for 49 cents, I found The Adventures of An African Slave Trader, published in 1856. There was, for 19 cents, a dog-eared old copy of a military criticism and appreciation of the French Zouaves by a sometime captain of infantry in the American army who later turned out to be the head of the Union Armies (for a while) during the Civil War. His name was McClellan. I found old French grammars and a copy of "Don Quixote" that was older than your granddaddy.

"WHERE does this stuff come from?" I asked the sad-faced gentleman who managed this establishment. "From people's attics and cellars or libraries."

Close to his desk where he could keep an eye on them were the "Sex" books. As I wrote down several titles he turned severely upon me and cried, "Don't do that. You reporters only want to make fun. People wouldn't understand. It hurts the trade."

Most of these books have lurid titles, but that is about the only thing in them that does not concern incomprehensible medical terms and dry statistics. They have been republished in bright, gaudy jackets for sales purposes—but those who buy them rarely find what they think they are going to find.

Axis Gambles to Win This Year Figures U. S. Unready Until 1943

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—By all odds the most important thing the American people have got to understand about this war—and understand it quickly—is that the Axis is gambling everything on 1942, while the United Nations are talking about victory in 1944.

And the danger—which few people seem to realize—is that desperate, ruthless dictators, willing to stake everything they have, including long range submarine attacks and landing forces 6,000 miles from home, may conceivably be successful in 1942.

After 1942, Axis dictators know, the slow-moving, lumbering industrial giant of the United States will swing into action. After 1942, for the Axis, it will be too late.

This realization is why some Washington executives now are advocating more troops transports and merchant vessels which can be finished this year, rather than battleships to be finished in three years. That is why an all-important backstage debate now goes on between the Navy and Win-the-War-Now boys about switching turbines from 1944 battleships to 1942 troopships.

That is also why the Win-the-War-Now boys favor a stiff offensive. As Secretary Stimson said last week, carrying the war to the enemy's waters keeps their submarines out of ours.

Secret (?) Map.

JOE EASTMAN, of the interstate commerce commission, was holding a hearing on construction of a badly-needed pipe-line for crude oil from Wichita Falls, Texas, to Savannah, Ga.

Vincent Shinkle, of Trans-American Pipe-line, was holding forth. He produced maps showing the mid-continent field this pipe-line would traverse; finally came to a map showing the U. S. naval and air bases in the Atlantic area which this pipe-line would supply.

Suddenly, up jumped Brigadier General Walter Pyron, strode to the hearing desk, ripped the map from the book.

"That map contains military secrets," he exclaimed. "Where did you get it?"

"From the National Geographic Society," replied Mr. Shinkle. "They have printed more than a million — all approved by the army."

Interesting and irrelevant coincidence: Before he was recently commissioned in the army, Brigadier General Pyron was a high official of the Gulf Oil company.

Big Companies Oppose.

IT SO HAPPENS that all the big oil companies are fighting this new pipe-line. The proposed pipeline will be a common carrier. In other words, like a railroad, it will carry anybody's oil.

To get the significance of this, it must be remembered that pipelines are the means by which the big oil companies control prices and dominate the industry. A major part of U. S. oil fields are pioneered and developed by independent wild-catters. But after developing a field, they can only market their oil through pipelines, and those are in the hands of the big companies.

Even the new pipe-line from Baton Rouge to Greensboro, N. C., to be used for gasoline, is owned 50-50 by Shell and Standard.

But the proposed new line from Wichita Falls, Tex. to Georgia will carry crude oil from any company.

Note—Mr. Ickes, usually a crusader for the little fellow, isn't enthusiastic about the independent pipe-line. Some say this is because his deputy oil administrator, Ralph Davies, is a Standard Oil executive; some say it is because the promoter of the independent line, Aldace Walker, is the brother-in-law of Chip Roberts, unbeloved by Mr. Ickes.

Dewey and Communists.

SOME members of New York's board of higher education are convinced that Crime-Crusader Tom Dewey has made a political deal with the Communists as a step toward being elected governor of New York this fall.

For some time, Communist teachers have been a headache to New York's four city colleges—Queens, Hunter, Brooklyn and City of New York. So a committee consisting of Ira Hirschmann and Lawson Stone, son of Chief Justice Stone, was appointed to give suspended Communists a fair trial, and if guilty, oust them.

Hardest clamorer for ousting the Communist teachers was Charles Tuttle, active in Republican politics, an oponent of FDR in the 1930 race for the governorship of New York, and a strong Dewey man. Tuttle, a member of the board of higher education, has constantly attacked the board for not taking drastic action against the Communists long ago. He even wanted to fire a big bunch at once.

The other day, however, Tuttle approached Chairman Hirschmann of the special committee on Communist teachers and said:

"I've been talking to Mr. X who wants to settle all this Communist business. And I think he's got a fine basis for a settlement."

"Why is it your job to settle this?" asked Hirschmann.

"Well, I couldn't refuse to negotiate, could I?"

When Hirschmann reported this to Lawson Stone, the latter's comment was: "Dewey has made a deal with the Communists."

Since then, Dr. Bella Dodd, representative of the teachers' union, has been negotiating with Hirschmann and Stone regarding Communist teachers who face trial, and proposing that a few of the more vehement teachers be ousted and all the others have the charges against them dismissed.

After she made the proposal, Hirschmann and Stone popped this question:

"How can we get a proposal like this by Tuttle. He's been yelling his head off to prosecute these charges."

"Oh," replied Dr. Dodd, "we've got him all fixed up."

Note—In his last race for governor of New York, Tom Dewey lost out by only about 100,000 votes. There are just about 100,000 votes controlled by the Communist party in New York.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—In spite of all the complaints and calumny heaped on the head of the American business man for our halting, jerky progress military preparation, some pretty astute observers here are already beginning to say that he probably will emerge as one of the war's real heroes.

Putting the United States industrial machine into high gear is like trying to get an elephant away from the barrier in time to keep up with the field at the Kentucky Derby. The point is that the only jockey that could ride herd on the brute at all is that afore-mentioned American business man.

WHAT brought all this on was that wandering around the marble halls of the War Production Board building recently, I got a look-see into Chairman Donald M. Nelson's system of breaking bottle necks. Just who is the real author of the system, nobody seems to know, but it's a beautiful example of how that A.B.M. is keeping the pachyderm on the track.

It's what is known as the Progress Reporting Division. It sounds dull. Most of the work in it is. But the results obtained aren't. The PRD has a list of more than 300 principal military items now in production. Almost every minute of the day, "progress" sheets on each one of those items drops on the desk of one of PRD's officials.

It shows to the day, almost to the hour, exactly what the production status of that article is, and the minute a lag shows up, the Division reports to the proper WPB executive who takes steps to pick up the slack.

For example there are dozens of units that go into a tank. There are tank hulls, motors, transmissions, guns, treads, etc. A bottle neck in any one of these will stop one whole section of the entire tank program.

Almost as soon as there is a slow-down in the tank program, the PRD official knows it. He calls for a breakdown on the tank production sheet. He gets another immediately that may show the slack is in transmissions. He gets another breakdown sheet, showing progress at all factories producing tank transmissions and then the trouble-shooting starts.

IN SOME instances, PRD officials say, they have been able to spot the source of a bottle neck within 30 minutes after it first appeared on the initial progress sheet.

There is plenty of red tape in the war production effort, even outside political circles. Any one who sets out to look for it, doesn't have to look far.

The insignia of army officials stationed here is a blue star on a white background, encircled with a narrow band of red. Washington wags are fond of saying, "That's a general in a white fog, surrounded by red tape."

Sometimes, it seems that the whole business is like that, but it isn't and in spite of all the red tape there is, the U. S. production machine is gathering steam.

A Chicago map maker has been deluged recently with inquiries as to the location of the town of "Sans Origine."

Folks at home have been getting telegrams from this mysterious place, signed by their boys in the armed services.

"Sans Origine" won't be found on any map. The words are French and mean "without place of origin." The device is used by the telegraph companies to indicate that the place from which the massage was sent cannot be revealed.

Why don't the newspapers borrow the phrase? It would be a grand relief from the hackneyed "an unimpeachable source" or "a usually reliable informant."—Akron Beacon-Journal.

A Farmer's Diary

The First Big Job

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

ON A COLD morning, near the entrance to the city, I overtook a teen-age boy, walking along the roadside. His face and ears were purple for he was facing the sharp north wind. I stopped and invited him to ride.

"Quite cold," I said.

He shivered. "Yes—I've walked a half mile. Our house is down beyond that timber."

"And why are you walking to school on such a cold morning?" I asked. "Doesn't the bus come out here?"

"Yes—but we've bought a farm out here and now we're tryin' to pay for it. Pop says we'll have hard sledding for a year or two, until we can raise our living on it."

"How old are you?"

"Sixteen—but nobody'll believe it but my own folks. I've got three younger brothers. A neighbor across the hill said he'd do our fitting and planning if I'd help him on his farm this summer. My Dad works at the steel mill but right now they haven't called him back. It makes us kind o' short on money — and rations — but the neighbor I'm goin' to work for lets us have milk against my pay —and I can't start until school is out. He'll loan us seeds to put out crops with, too. Pop cuts wood on shares and the neighbor hauls it for us. That's better'n buyin' coal when you don't have the money. I help with chores down there, after school."

"And wha. will you do when you graduate?" I wondered.

"Oh—that's two years yet. Why —I'm goin' to be a pilot on a bomber and I hope this war will last until I get to flyin'. Mom cries sometimes when I read her what wonderful things bombers can do. Dad don't say much—just sets up straight and looks at me kindo' sharp. Since we've got this farm of our own and the neighbors are so good to us, I feel like bein' a bomber more'n ever. It seems like the first big job there is to do is to defend our own home and neighborhood. I'm proud of our country now—but wait until I can get away up in the clouds and fight for it."

Venezuela's Only Woman Airplane Pilot Visits U. S.

KANSAS CITY — (INS) — Venezuela's only woman airplane pilot traveled to Kansas City recently to visit the plant which produced the plane in which she learned to fly two years ago at Roosevelt Field, L. I.

"It was an insatiable urge," Miss Mary Calcano, of Caracas, remarked without the least accent. "I had to see where that plane was built."

Her lack of accent was explained by the fact she was an interpreter for an American company in Caracas when it became agent for an airplane manufacturer.

Little Nazi sentiment is evident in her native land, Miss Calcano revealed during her visit at the Rearwin plant, where the plane was constructed.

A staunch believer in the good neighbor policy, she declared it is receiving an excellent response in the South American countries.

"There is far better understanding there now of the great democracy to the north than at any previous time," she said

COUNCIL WILL TAKE UP NEW HOSPITAL PACT

Mansfield In Line For Lower Rate Than County, But It's Still Higher Than '41.

Mansfield's city council will probably be called upon next Tuesday to consider the contract for the care of indigent patients at General hospital.

Russell D. Porch, chairman of council's finance committee, said today that members of his committee had met with Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, hospital superintendent, for a discussion of the costs of the care of patients.

The hospital has asked the city to increase the rate for the daily care of indigent patients from $4.25 to 4.75. At the last regular session of council, this request was referred to the finance committee for study.

The proposed rate is 75 cents lower than that given for Richland county patients but 50 cents higher than the rate which the city has been paying for several years.

Dr. Fonkalsrud explained the difference between the city and county rates by saying that the city is given the lower rate because it supplies water to the hospital at a reduced rate. The increase in the rate is being asked because of "increased costs," according to Fonkalsrud.

The hospital formerly received water free but in 1938 a state law forbid the city from giving water away to any institution without charge. Faced with the possibility of paying for water at metered cost, the hospital agreed to give the city a lower rate for indigent care, if a low flat rate was charged for water and sewer service.

Former Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist agreed to allow the hospital to pay a flat rate of $100 a year for all water used and $50 a year for sewer service.

An agreement between the Richland county commissioners and the hospital for the care of indigent patients at a cost of $5.50 per day went into effect last Monday. It will be in effect until Dec. 31.

Township trustees in the county are expected to return contracts for the care of indigents in the near future. They have been offered the same rate as the county but would only pay $3.75 of the $5.50, the county assuming the remainder of the cost.

HUNT STABBER AFTER FINDING BODY OF MISSING CONDUCTOR

(By Associated Press)

MIDDLETOWN — The mystery of what became of W. G. Faber, 56-year-old conductor for the Big Four railroad, has been solved, but police set out today on a deeper problem—who stabbed him Dec. 29 and threw him into a canal and why?

The only clues available were his battered cap, some small change, and a patch of blood on the floor of a deadhead coach in which some vagrant was reported riding.

Faber's body was found floating at the headgates of the canal yesterday and Coroner Garrett J. Boone reported that the conductor had been stabbed in the chest and was either dead or dying when thrown into the water.

Dr. Boone, returning a murder verdict, said robbery apparently was not the motive. An expensive watch, $27, and railroad tickets were found in the dead man's pockets.

Faber, a resident of Cleveland, was last seen shortly before 11 p. m. Dec. 29 when his mail and express train left Middletown. He told a brakeman that he was going to see if anybody was riding in the darkened coach. When the train reached Carlisle station, six miles north, he was missing.

One door of the deadhead coach was open and the cap, coins, and pool of blood were inside.

Railroad police and workers and county officials searched the right of way. The Big Miami river was dragged during the next few days. A vagrant of Dayton was questioned.

Nothing more was learned of Faber's fate until Jacob Barnicle, a watchman, saw the body, floating about a mile from where a railroad bridge crosses the canal.

RICHLAND HAS BIG RESPONSE ON NURSE CALL

County Has Nearly Half of Those Enlisted In Reserve Corps From District.

Richland county area has enrolled almost half of the 65 nurses registered for First and Second Reserve service in the American Red Cross in the eight-county area supervised by the Local Committee on Red Cross Nursing Service.

Of this number six have been assigned to active duty according to Mrs. Harry Buchan, committee chairman, who has been informed that the rate of enrollment of Ohio nurses in the First Reserve of American Red Cross nurses has increased approximately seven times since the outbreak of the war.

Miss Margaret Wigton of Mansfield, was the first Red Cross nurse assigned to active duty and is now stationed at the United States Naval hospital at San Diego. Miss Rosemary Stover of Ashland is also stationed at the same hospital.

Miss Virginia Ayers, also of Mansfield, was assigned to Fort Knox, Ky., Miss Ruth Kirkpatrick of Shelby is a member of the Lakeside hospital unit. Miss Madonna Viers of Shelby is on duty at Billings General hospital in Indiana and Miss Juanita Ralston of Mount Vernon is stationed at Maxwell Field, Ala.

A national First Reserve of 50,000 nurses is needed to take care of the tremendously expanded army and navy forces of the country, Mrs. Buchan has been informed by Miss Marguerite Wales, Eastern Area, director of the Red Cross Nursing Service, while a Second Reserve must be established to serve civilian areas.

The Second Reserve is comprised of nurses who by military regulation regarding marriage or age are not available for military duty but are prepared to serve in disasters, war time epidemics, and to reinforce nursing staffs of civilian hospitals or to do public health work for civilian defense.

SUIT SEEKING $1,070 AMOUNT

P. P. Leonard of Cleveland, vice president and secretary of the Southern Produce company of Mansfield, has filed suit in the civil division of municipal court against Charles Joslyn of Cleveland for $1,070 which he claims Joslyn owes.

Leonard claims that Joslyn borrowed $1,000 from him on Dec. 2, 1940 and had agreed to repay the loan on demand but had failed to do so. Leonard claims that $70 is also due in interest.

Joslyn has until March 10 to file his answer with the municipal court here.

Sensations of a man given sight for the first time after 18 years of blindness and his first reactions to a strange new world of color, light and shapes will be revealed by George Campbell, 22, when he speaks at a meeting of the Mansfield Lions club tonight and the Kiwanis at noon tomorrow at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. Campbell lived in darkness until he was 18 when a series of surgical operations brought him his sight.

THEATERS

Aerial Thriller.

"Captain of the Clouds," James Cagney, starring picture, has been held over at the Ohio through Friday due to popular request. The picture, filmed in technicolor, is an air thriller featuring the exploits of some Canadian northwoodsmen who want to take a crack at the Luftwaffe, once they enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force, but are forced to remain on the ground as instructors because of their age. Cagney however parts a "regular" from his papers and gets a chance at a Messerschmitt. Brenda Marshall, Dennis Morgan and Alan Hale are in the cast.

Romantic Drama.

The absorbing story of the life and loves of a beautiful ballet dancer is told in "The Men In Her Life," Loretta Young's starring vehicle opening today at the Madison. Toast of the continent, the dancer dreams of even greater successes and uses hearts as stepping stones to get there. Conrad Veidt, usually cast in a villainous role, plays a sympathetic part as the dancer's instructor. Dean Jagger, John Shepperd and Otto Kruger are in the cast. "Four Jacks and a Jill," with Ray Bolger and Anne Shirley is the second attraction.

Comedy Romance.

Jeanette MacDonald and Brian Aherne are teamed together in "Smilin' Through," the time-honored story, showing at the Ritz. Filmed in technicolor the picture also has Gene Raymond and Ian Hunter in the cast. "Federal Fugitives," with Neil Hamilton and Doris Day is the second attraction.

Sentimental Story.

"Sing For Your Supper," the Park attraction, features Jinx Faulkenburg as a danceland songbird who tries to extricate an impoverished orchestra from its predicament. Charles Buddy Rogers has the role of the orchestra leader and the cast includes Eve Arden, Benny Baker, and Bert Gordon, the "Mad Russian." The second attraction, "Siren of the South Seas," has Movita, Warren Hull, John St. Polis and Kenneth Harland.

Even Czech Cows Aid Anti-Nazi Sabotage Drive

BOSTON—(INS)—Jan Masaryk, pre-Hitler vice-premier and Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, stuck his tongue into his cheek, and then began to talk about sabotage within his native land.

"Even the cows cooperate. The Germans have proved statistically that Czech cows give very much less milk than German cows. How odd."

About the Skoda Munition Works:

"I have urged the workers to slow down. If they can waste only two minutes every hour the waste will pile up incredibly, and they waste many more than two minutes. The slowdown is the most effective form of sabotage and most difficult to detect."

And he added:

"Our railroad men, also, are doing a magnificent job. It is a curious thing how often freight cars sent into my country turn up at the wrong destination, how goods sent north somehow manage to go south, how many cars split switches, how many delays there can be."

Masaryk speaks via short-wave weekly in a broadcast beamed at Czechoslovakia.

COLDWATER, Miss.—(U.P.)—This town of 900 is settling down a few thousand yards southwest of the speck on the map it formerly occupied. The government bought the old site for a flood control dam. Stores, bank, cotton gins and a water tank were torn down and rebuilt. About 100 homes were intact.

HOLDS FROZEN FOODS BETTER

AUSTIN, Tex.—(U.P.)—New quick freezing and dehydration processes for food are going to make the diet for this war's American soldiers better than it was for the doughboys of 1918.

That's the word of Luis Bartlett, University of Texas engineer and inventor of a process for dehydrating sweet potatoes.

"Especially at training camps is it practical to use dried foods," said Bartlett. "It solves a transportation problem and releases tin cans for where they are needed—at the front."

Some concentrated, dehydrated foods such as yams might be used by men at the front. Frozen foods generally are most suited for serving to soldiers behind the lines.

WAS OLD COAST HOTEL PART OF JAP WAR PLAN?

FBI Men Move In at Monterey, Seize Charts, Floodlight; Evacuate Fishermen.

By SIGRID ARNE

SAN FRANCISCO —(WW)— The Higashi hotel in Monterey, Calif., is an example of the trail the FBI is uncovering in California: The trail Japan may have intended to use for an invasion of the United States.

The Higashi is a ramshackle wooden building in the Japanese section of Monterey. But it's a stone's throw from the famous Monterey harbor in which hundreds of Japanese fishermen have worked. It's just a short drive from the Higashi to Fort Ord, where Thousands of American lads are learning the secrets of mechanized warfare.

The Higashi was known to be the hangout of the thousands or more Japanese who live in Monterey. FBI spent hours in the place combing it for contraband. Their most interesting find was a huge floodlight some Ritz-Carlton might have used on the night of a big party.

But the Higashi is a rundown two-story buidling. The floodlight might, at some time, have been used to drive sardines into the nets in Monterey bay. But the FBI took no chances. The agents made arrests and confiscated the floodlight, as well as the charts of the bay they found in the hotel.

In Monterey a story floats around—it's now impossible to prove—concerning some Japanese divers who worked with the Abalone fleet. They probably knew every crag under the surface of the bay. But about six months ago they quit their jobs, and headed for Tokyo. Jittery Monterey people point out that such Abalone divers would make excellent submarine captains.

In the Monterey area is a small town named Watsonville which had a sports good store owned by a Japanese. It lies on the way from Monterey, with its huge army training center, to San Francisco, with its many shipyards and air fields.

FBI had to get a truck to haul away the ammunition they found in that small-town sporting goods store.

Back of Monterey lies Salinas in a great truck-gardening valley. There the FBI raided a Buddhist temple, and found some curious equipment for a religious house: Guns and radio microphones. There they also found a Japanese who claimed to be a priest, but until recent years he was an officer in the Tokyo police force.

And near Salinas the FBI raided a huge lettuce plantation run by a Japanese and worked by 250 Japanese field laborers, who lived in 26 shacks. In them the FBI found guns, cameras and search lights.

In the San Francisco area the trail curved on.

Take a small raid the FBI made on an ordinary middle-class apartment house. They arrested three Japanese. Two of them, until recently, had been officers in the Japanese army. Here they were white-collar workers in a Japanese bank.

But they could walk a short distance from their apartment to a San Francisco hill where they could, if they wished, count any convoy forming in San Francisco bay. There were strong binoculars in their apartment, and in another room in the building the FBI found elaborate photographic equipment.

Just across the bay, near the Oakland airport, the FBI raided a house where a Japanese father and son had more binoculars, flashlights and fireworks. The father explained he had sold fireworks on Fourth of July. A few days later, in jail, he tried to commit suicide.

His home was near enough to the important Alameda air base to signal Japanese bombers—just in case he had wanted to use the fireworks for that purpose.

Up the bay is Vallejo, the town which feeds and sleeps the men who are making submarines at Mare island. There the FBI raided a drab little laundry just a short distance from the entrance to the island. The laundry had done washing for the Mare island workers.

The laundry workers had a complete set of United States navy signal flags, guns, cameras (and it's easy to take pictures of the Mare island ways from the shore) and a short-wave radio set.

There have been dozens of other arrests and raids. The houses yield an almost uniform equipment: Shore-wave sets, guns, ammunition, cameras—and even telegraph keys.

At first the Californians who knew the Japanese were skeptical. The little launderyman was always smiling. The little fisherman sent all his children to school.

But when it turned out that the laundry man had a gun and ammunition and the fisherman had an expensive camera—the state's skepticism turned into anxious interest in the FBI raids.

ANOTHER CURB

WPB Curtails Civilian Use of Duck and Goose Feathers.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Use of goose and duck feathers has been restricted to war orders, mainly for army sleeping bags.

An order of the War Production Board prohibited manufacturers and dealers having goose and duck feathers on hand from using them for civilian goods, even to fill orders already received, because "army and navy needs far exceed the production."

Remember Without Wanting + + +

CHAPTER XII

During those last two weeks in December Judith wanted to marry Max. . . . With each of his brief, loving notes, she knew how intensely she wanted to marry him. Her work, her fine ideas of independence? She could go on with her work, of course, but independence no longer mattered. Only Max mattered, the physical, tangible Max.

She wrote to him each evening and dropped the letter in the box on her way to the office in the morning. Hers were not notes but letters into which with a facility that amazed her she poured the best of her thoughts and feelings for him. . . . The trained hands of the artist turned out consistently good work. The trained hands, but not the mind, nor the heart. Only Max could reach her mind and heart now. For Max had become her whole world.

The letter to him was finished, a long, endearing one, and she was trying to read in bed when Emily came in from another evening of bridge with Ames and Phyllis and, of course, Tim.

"How are Ames and Phyllis?"

And Emily looked at her and shook her brown head. "Phyllis doesn't improve as a housewife. It's 'Ames, darling, will you put on the coffee? Ames, empty the ash trays, dear. . . . Oh, did I do something wrong on the last play? I wasn't paying attention. . . . Where did I put the cigarets, Ames.' . . . The ones who aren't married see the mistakes in the ones who are. Phyllis seems to think that marriage is one long glorious holiday and that when you marry, you get out of doing the things you don't like to do and that your husband should give until it hurts. Ames is a dear. He loves having a place of his own and being host. Mixing a drink is a ritual with him. Maybe I'm wrong, Judith, but Phyllis fails to do the little things I'd like to do, the little things I'd feel were my special jobs."

Judith smiled. Then she asked, "Have you made up your mind about going home for Christmas? I wish you'd go."

"No. I'm—I'm not going home and I'm not going home with you. I'm . . ." There was no happiness in her look, no enthusiasm in her voice. "I'm going to meet Tim's family on Christmas night. It's their annual open-house and the little girl from the prairies is going to see how the fashionable world lives."

"Tim doesn't understand. He takes it all for granted. So on Christmas night I'm going to see the kind of life they'll bring him back to when they think he's played around enough with girls like me. I'm waiting for the end. It's like sitting on a powder keg. I hope I can take it."

Seeing the letter addressed to Max, she smiled rather sadly. "Another letter? Are you so sure of him?"

"Yes, and of myself. I want to marry him, Emily. I've known it since he left and missing him is one long continuous ache. So a man becomes all-important and I'll have to take back my very modern theories on the emancipated woman. Men have given us a vote, an education, jobs and the privilege of sitting in a bar, but they haven't changed our natures. I was thinking of that before you came in. A woman is a deep, intuitive being who looks, sometimes without being aware of looking, for a man to be all-important. Her very nature decides for her. Her heart, her body and not her mind. Even if she has a superior mind, it can't win against her body and her heart."

Emily looked at her a moment before she said, "But men are not like that. Their minds, their better judgments, rule them in most cases. They're less emotional so that their minds can rule them. How many men have given security and family for love? Not many. A lot of women have and more would if men were willing to make the sacrifice . . . I'm so tired!"

The lawn before the Barth home in Clinton had been raked clean of leaves and now small patches of snow covered the brown bareness. Seeing Max's gift on her arm, a charm bracelet, Judith pressed her finger to the bell late that Christmas eve, and when the door opened she was greeted by shouts of Harriet's little boys and her mother's beaming face.

If she and Max were married, he would be with her, she thought, pressing her cold face against her mother's warm one as the little boys tugged at her coat. But Max here . . . It seemed foreign to visualize the suave Max in this domestic setting. Would he be bored or amused?

Walter looked up with grave brown eyes.

"Santa Claus is coming tonight!"

"Not if you and Bill don't go to bed," Mrs. Barth said. "They're so excited, Judith. Take off your things, dear. Your father and Larry and Harriet have gone out to do some last-minute shopping for the tree."

Not ever before had Judith dropped to her knees to embrace her nephews. But something in their upturned faces drew her and she put her arms around them, kissing their flushed cheeks. Sons . . . Harriet's sons. . . . Max's sons? A miniature Max? She felt suddenly as though she were going to cry.

Mrs. Barth said, "Now my two darlings are going to bed."

When Judith glanced somewhat guiltily at her mother, Mrs. Barth smiled as though she understood.

Not until Bessie, the aroma of her pies permeating the house, had gone and the tree had been trimmed did the family settle down to conversation.

It was then that Harriet, her shoes kicked from her aching feet, her face shining, noticed the bracelet on her sister's arm.

"Isn't this new?"

Larry, Harriet's husband, grinned, but there was something bitter in that grin. "I've been telling you she's holding out on us."

Judith touched Max's gift lovingly, she was thinking of the wallet she had sent him.

"Yes, it is new. From a friend in New York." From Max, my dearest love. Where are you tonight? Sitting opposite Mr. So-and-So with a Scotch and soda and thinking of me, wanting me? . . . She said, "From the most interesting man I've ever known."

* * *

They were all looking at her as if they were sadly aware that she lived in a world they could not share and one in which their love could not penetrate. She felt a mocking resentment in the expression on Larry's face and she felt suddenly as if she had hurt her parents. They were jealous of her! Anger, rather than the great fire roaring up the fireplace, warmed her. She thought, flinging them an angry glance, you would have me like Harriet, my hair in wisps, my feet aching, my hips spreading, and wearing last year's dress! But I won't be like that!

It was the rebellious Judith who asked coldly, "Is there anything wrong with my accepting a gift from a friend in Nek York?"

Larry looked at her sharply. "Nothing; but you don't have to be so damned superior about what you do away from here!"

Mrs. Barth looked shocked and grieved. "Please . . . not tonight. I'm surprised at both of you. We're all very tired." She tried to smile. "Go up to bed, Larry. Coming, Nicholas?"

Larry murmured, "I'm sorry," and left the room, following Nicholas and Isobel Barth up the steps.

"I'll be up in a minute," Harriet called. Then she turned to Judith. "Don't hold it against him please. You know how fond he is of you. It's just that—that things haven't been going too well lately at the office and all the bills coming in and everything. He knew he was going to get an increase; and I've never seen anyone so hurt because it was only two dollars a week. He wants only the best for the children and me and he can't give it to us. And then you come home and I suppose it's the comparison between the way you look and the way I look. Mother and Dad are wonderful to us, but it hurts Larry's pride that they have to help us a little. You're not married, Judith!"

"And if I'm superior, I don't know it."

"I suppose I talk too much about you to him."

Judith looked into Harriet's tired, dark eyes. "Tell me, do you love Larry as much now as you did when you married him?"

"Why, I love him more! I love him in spite of the faults and weaknesses I didn't know he had when I married him." She smiled. "I've nursed him through illnesses. I've quarreled violently with him, I've borne two children. We've seen each other at our worst—but I love him more. You don't truly love a man, Judith, until the roots of your life are growing with his."

As she pushed back her hair, she glanced at the gaily-decorated trees and at the toys beneath it. "You see, Larry thinks I envy you. But I don't. I know more than you, Judith. I'm living more than yours, but I'm still living more than you. It took me a long time to see that."

"We chose different ways. We're both doing what we set out to do." She would have told her about Max then if Harriet had not looked so tired.

Harriet arose, and, bending down, picked up her shoes. "Oh, I forgot! Do you remember Steve Larrabee? He's gone home for Christmas, but he'll be back tomorrow night. We'd planned to go dancing if you felt like it. Not a party, just the four of us. He's asked about you several times."

Steve Larrabee . . . She remembered a splendid physique, a pair of incredibly beautiful blue eyes and a boyish smile.

"Of course, I'd love to go."

"Larry is going to be awfully ashamed of losing his temper."

"Perhaps I'll be more ashamed if ever I discover that what he said was true."

"Nonsense. Coming up? I'll put out the tree lights."

"No. Let me. I'll be up later."

This little while was time to be with Max, to bring him close, to have him share the faded green divan with her. All your best thoughts of the person you love are never told, she said to herself, for they come to you in moments like this when you are quite alone. . . . Oh, Max, I'm not superior or arrogant with you! You make me feel insignificant and helpless and young. The thought of you opens every door in my mind. It took Max and Judith to make—us. We'll be married. Not the usual marriage, not Harriet's kind of marriage, but one that only we could make. And we'll have a son, a miniature you.

CHICAGO—(INS)—It was the sugar shortage that helped Mary Elizabeth Lush, 17-year-old Ames, Ia., girl to her championship in the national cherry pie baking contest, she disclosed today.

"You see," she said, "I used honey instead of sugar. Honey makes the pie taste better, and it doesn't darken the cherries."

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—It isn't easy to tell, from fan-mail, whether a particular column is good, bad or junk.

Gen. Johnson.

Yet there is one general rule that sometimes helps a little. If it draws a lot of mail and it is mostly hopping mad or grudgingly favorable, you must have hit something.

Recently I suggested in a column that even after Pearl Harbor, the people were not sufficiently waked up about this war—"don't give a tinker's damn" were the words used.

Boy, did that one bounce back! It was like prodding a hornet's nest.

If there had been a little more time, I might have saved some eminent statesmen, who later used similar expressions in speeches, a good deal of embarrassment.

Without one single exception, these letters were red-hot. Aren't the people submitting to confiscatory taxes without a murmur? Who kicks about restrictions on almost everything used in daily living?

Where has a word been heard against drafting our men-folk and breaking up their lives? Who has gone to the wailing wall because his business and his capital are being ruined? What has been asked that has not been freely given? Don't we give a tinker's damn about all that?

Who prepared our minds for any such thing as this? We were told that the billions we were asked for was to keep us out of war. We were told as late as January 1941 that we would not need to send troops abroad. Then the whole tune changed without warning.

We were not even told the state of our preparedness in understandable figures. We were convinced that our navy was unbeatable and our west coast secure.

Then came Pearl Harbor and the details of that are not even yet clear. The management of our war production was so badly bungled that nobody even undertakes to defend it.

Great ships like the Normandie are rarely lost in the harbor of New York. But there lies what was the biggest ship afloat and we don't know why.

We want to help more directly in defense and plead for leadership—and we got the OCD. We make sacrifices and think that includes us all and learn that congressmen want pensions and one great faction of organized labor demands a dollar-a-day increase and a provision to tie their wages to any rise in the cast of living and thus to insure themselves against inflation while wishing it on the rest of us.

These are actual excerpts paraphrased only to fit them together. One letter ended:

"So the people don't give a tinker's damn, hey? Well suppose you show us how to give a damn instead of calling names."

A young fellow—a citizen of Mount Gilead, Ohio—got the idea of organizing the area of his home town, under the slogan "Production Now." They are making an inventory of all tractors, power farm machinery and automobiles in the 16 townships.

By pooling heavy-duty equipment, they can greatly increase the output and reduce the man-hours required for their farm production. The automobile equipment of the area is likewise to be directed in such a way as to reduce to a minimum the mileage of each car and serve the needs of each family with the fewest possible number of empty seats.

The possibilities of this plan are great. Some modification of it would be highly beneficial in every community.

It is not the purpose of this column to discuss that but to suggest that all that was needed in Mount Gilead was a little simple intelligent leadership of a willing people. That is all that the nation needs.

YOUTH SHOOTS SWEETHEART IN MOVIE BALCONY

Audience Thinks Sound of Gun Part of Gangster Film on Screen.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO — Clarence MacDonald, 17, confessed today that he had shot pretty 17-year-old Doro-Thy Borz in the dark balcony of a downtown theater while a gangster film, "Sealed Lips," unreeled on the screen.

MacDonald was arrested near his home a few hours after his victim, a classmate sweetheart, was identified. His arrest and confession climaxed a 12-hour investigation in which the police guarded exits at the Palace theater in a hope of trapping him.

The dead girl was identified earlier through newspaper pictures of her coat and other clothing.

Elain Mastney, a friend of Dorothy, told police that she had quarreled recently with MacDonald and that the youth had threatened Dorothy with a gun a week ago at a bowling alley. Elain said MacDonald was very jealous.

"He told her that no one could have her, if he didn't," Duffy quoted Elain as saying.

She told him that he had made a final date with Dorothy to attend the Palace theater and it was on this information that the police acted.

The shooting occurred during the showing of a gangster picture and patrons of theater who heard the shot believed it was only a sound effect. The girl died a few minutes later in the arms of a theater attendant before she could identify herself or her assailant.

William Schupa, an attorney, seated in another section of the balcony, said he saw the couple embracing. Later the girl screamed:

"My God, he's got a gun." She paused, then cried, "No, no, please."

It was then the shot was fired. Schupa said the youth dashed to the top of the balcony, 12 rows above his seat, ran across the theater and fled through an exit.

MacDonald and Miss Droz were seniors at Sterling Morton high school in Berwyn. After their recent quarrel, MacDonald quit his classes.

An amusing scene is repeated almost daily at the new Army Recruiting office in the ground floor of the Gardner apartment building at 114 Park avenue west. Until several months ago the space was used for a grocery, and the awning still says "Constance Market." Just about every day, and generally when Sgt. Hobart Ellifritt is right in the process of interviewing a prospective enlistee, a woman with a market basket walks in ready to do her shopping for the day. Usually she backs out quickly when she sees uniforms instead of canned goods, but sometimes Ellifritt has to stop to explain.

Mansfield garages will be cleared of all those old license plates with which many motorists decorate the walls if Frank Beverstock, secretary of the Richland county automobile club, has his way. Beverstock plans to place a large box in the club headquarters during the sale of new plates and invited motorists to turn the old ones in. Old plates, he said contain valuable steel and all metal gathered in this way will be sold for scrap, the proceeds to aid the Red Cross. The license sale starts March 2.

A youth who was found guilty of the theft of four used tires from a Mansfield filling station escaped the maximum penalty for tire theft today because the filling station attendant admitted the tires were left outside over night without a lock on them. In sentencing the youth to 30 days in jail, Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch said the attendant was negligent in leaving tires outside when they are so valuable, and added that he did not think the thief deserved the maximum penalty under the circumstances.

LEGISLATION TO BE AIMED AT STOPPAGES

Washington Predicts Strong Support For Measure After FDR Talk.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Drastic "work or fight" legislation may soon be sought by the administration to give the war labor board a strong hand in its task of eliminating all stoppages in arms production.

An informed source predicted today that this request to congress was likely, and indications were that it would command strong support especially since President Roosevelt called on Americans in his Monday night radio address not to stop work a single day.

Proposals for such legislation were said to have originated with officials charged with responsibility for all-out war production. President Roosevelt has repeatedly stressed the need for uninterrupted production in numerous speeches during the past war, but the arms program, nevertheless has lost hundreds of thousands of man-hours because of labor-management, jurisdictional and other controversies.

As outlined by one influential Democratic senator, the legislation probably would include provisions for the immediate drafting into the armed forces of any striking worker who was subject to military service but who had received deferment because of employment in an essential war job.

Under tentative plans, workers not subject to the selective service who went on strike would be blacklisted and their employment banned for a period of time by any plant working on a government contract.

The president's call for uninterrupted war production brought predictions in congress, meanwhile, that if the war labor board failed to find a formula to keep all of the industrial wheels turning without stop, congress would act to see that the job was done.

Senator Hill of Alabama, the Democratic whip, said he felt that some legislation might be necessary to give the board broader authority to prevent strikes.

Agreeing with this viewpoint, Senator Ellender (D. La.) a member of the labor committee, forecast speedy congressional action if the WLB failed to guarantee the uninterrupted production the president wanted.

This action might come, suggested Senator Taft (R. Ohio), in the form of legislation to freeze the open and closed shop status of war industries and to link wages to the cost of living. Under the latter provision, he said, wages would advance only as the cost of living rose. Taft said he believed members of the WLB would welcome establishment of such general policies.

SOLONS WHET PENSIONS AX

Eye Political Jobholders After Repealing of Congress Benefits.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — With repeal of their own pensions overwhelmingly voted by both houses, congress today whetted the ax for "some 250,000 political jobholders" who members contend will be eligible for the retirement benefits under existing law.

The strange saga of the pensions, which unexpectedly turned out to come not as monetary annuities but as verbal brickbats from constituents, started six weeks ago when congress with little fanfare voted to include its members, the president, cabinet officers, and other appointive jobholders in the civil service retirement benefits.

When the public became aware that they would virtually all have to be paid for at rates similar to those charged by private insurance companies—the uproar was instantaneous and terrific.

Caustic, bitter mail flooded congressional officers. A "bundles for congress" campaign was organized. The legislators gave up speedily.

Acting first the senate voted 75 to 5 to repeal the pensions insofar as they pertained to elective officers and cabinet ministers. The house followed by voting for the same thing 389 to 7—a heavier vote than the 388 to 1 by which the house voted to declare war on Japan.

But the repealer came as a rider to a bill carrying other legislation, and the whole thing is now in a conference between the house and senate. Before it gets out, many members have voted to fight to eliminate appointive, as well as elective officials.

"If congressmen are not entitled to these benefits, certainly the Hopkins, the Hillmans, the Hendersons and those others are not," Rep. Mott (R. Ore.) declared.

Rep. Smith (R. Ohio), said that under the law as it now stands "some 250,000 political jobholders, many of them getting as much as $12,000 a year each, will be eligible for these pensions."

More than 5,000 Mansfield and Richland county school children in the first four elementary grades and the senior year in high school will be examined for teeth defects during the six weeks that the state dental mobile clinic conducts examinations throughout all public, private and parochial schools in the county.

When the fire was put out three and one-half hours later, firemen found Miller's body in a doorway between the bedroom and living room in the second floor apartment. Mrs. Miller said she aroused him before she fled from the room and thought he had followed her out of the window.

Talk Cancellation Of Ohio Fair to Conserve Rubber

COLUMBUS — (AP) — The war may necessitate cancellation of the Ohio State fair this year.

The state board of agriculture, which discussed the question at a closed meeting yesterday, will meet again in about 10 days to give it further consideration.

Agriculture Director John T. Brown explained that the fair would take men from the farms, clog the highways and use materials needed in the war effort. Furthermore, federal officials have conferred with Gov. John W. Bricker about using the fairgrounds for storage of defense materials and quartering of troops, reliable sources reported.

Saving of rubber and haulage facilities were among the conservation features of the proposed cancellation, Brown said, adding that if the fair were not held many of his department's employes would be freed for other work.

Cancellation would rest with Bricker and Brown, the agriculture board acting only in an advisory capacity.

Recipes That Will Save You Money

By BETSY NEWMAN

Economy is now more than ever the watchword. We housewives should utilize every bit of the foodstuffs we buy, to make nourishing and good tasting dishes for our families. That is our principal part in the war program. We have other jobs too, but if we do not waste foods, we may be able, not only to conserve the family health at as little cost as possible, but put a little aside in war savings stamps and defense bonds.

Today's Menu.

Beef Pot Roast
Mashed or Riced Potatoes
Creamed Turnips Celery
Pickles Dutch Apple Pie
Coffee or Substitute

3 or 4 lbs. chuck or rump beef
Suet
Salt, pepper
1 bay leaf
1 onion
Hot water

Have the butcher give you a piece of suet with your meat; try it out in heavy pan (one of the old-fashioned iron saucepans is dandy), and when pretty well tried out, put in pot roast which has been wiped well with damp cloth. Brown meat on all sides, and just before it is browned add onion and brown with it. Salt and pepper meat when nicely brown all over, add bay leaf, and a little hot water. Set over very low heat and cook until meat is tender, adding a little water at a time if it boils dry. A stalk of celery also may be added for flavor if you like. When meat is done, in 2 or 3 hours, depending on the size and tenderness of the beef, remove pan from fire, take out meat and onion, celery and bay leaf, and pour off fat except 2 tablespoons. Add 2 tablespoons flour, mix smooth and gradually add 2 cups water, hot or cold, and stir vigorously. When smooth, set back on fire and gradually heat until boiling point is reached and it is thick, stirring all the time. Cook for 1 minute, taste to see if gravy is well seasoned, and serve in gravy bowl.

* * *

Celery Soup.

Green leaves and tough stalks celery
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon flour
Salt, pepper or paprika
2 cups milk

Use hearts of celery and tender stalks on table. Wash leaves and tough stalks well, cut in pieces, cut up 1 small onion and cook together in water to cover or slightly more, until very tender. Force through wire strainer, water and all. (This may be kept in the refrigerator or other cold place until next day.) Melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine in saucepan, add 1 tablespoon flour, mix smooth, and gradually add milk, stirring until smooth and slightly thick, season and serve.

* * *

Dutch Apple Pie.

1 9-inch pie shell
5 cups apples
⅞ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons pastry or cake flour
Dash cinnamon
⅓ cup light cream

Make rich pastry and line pan with it, fitting neatly around the sides and making a neat edge. Wash, core and pare apples, cut in eighths, and arrange neatly in pie shell. Combine sugar, flour, salt and cinnamon, mix well and blend in cream. Distribute mixture evenly over apples, cover with another pan, and bake in hot oven, 425° F., until apples are soft. Remove cover and continue baking until apples are lightly brown. If temperature seems too hot for entire period, reduce temperature after first 15 minutes to 375°.

Have You Forgotten How to Play?

By MME. QUI VIVE

Serious business is going on in this demented world of ours. And that is all the more reason why we should snatch a few moments of play when we can. It is only by such means that we can carry on, keep our balance. It isn't possible that we were put on this earth to be worried with fears. Happiness is a normal state of mind; we must make every effort to keep high-spirited.

Dignity is a commendable characteristic. But the mantle of dignity should not be so heavy that it can't be slipped off while we play with the kids. If you can't play, you're old, no matter if you're still in your 30s. If you never laugh you aren't fully alive.

Interest in community welfare and in the arts is stimulating. But there's no sense in drowning oneself in noble and intellectual pursuits. One must have fun. Life mustn't be all seriousness. Yes, conditions may get one down. But one can always bob up and romp with the dog.

The mother who enters into the pastimes and games of her children is a mother who is beloved. She's one of the gang. She isn't above playing baseball in the corner lot or even clattering around on roller skates.

I know grandmothers who are delightful play fellows. They make doll dresses for the granddaughters, play house with them, get out in the yard and have fun. They're just as companionable with their grandsons, turning switches for the electric train and helping to make an Indian headdress.

Is that dignified? No, it isn't. But it's sweet. The grandchildren love it.

It makes home what a home should be, a place that the children love and enjoy. A place where they are free to have fun. No fussing about a little dust on the rugs. The carpet sweeper will pick it up in a jiffy. Grandma won't mind.

The spirit of play keeps a woman within finger touch of her youth. It brightens her eyes. Spirits droop when life is all seriousness. It won't do to let the mind dwell all the time on one's cares and responsibilities. There's a chance of becoming morbid, and then what? That mildewed look appears. Wrinkles dig in. The figure changes, loses ginger.

If some over-serious men and women could regain the imaginative qualities of their childhood days they'd be wiser than they are now, and life would be easier for them. Play and laughter oil the wheels. Whenever you're feeling sort of sunk, join in the children's activities.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

My father rose as he finished his flattering comment, with its final command—for such I knew it to be—that I make arrangements for his seeing Mary and Olina before they kept any dinner engagement with Redfield.

"I will attend to everything," I said hastily, "but—must you go, now?"

He looked at me keenly.

"You have something else to tell me," he said.

"Yes, I have," I said with the vision of Olina's fan letter, and the cryptic water color painting accompanying it, before my eyes.

"I am leaving only for a few minutes," he told me. "I want to check up on Ronald, to make sure that he is safely under the sedative; then he ought to sleep through the afternoon. But I would not like him to waken and find himself alone, so I shall go back for a few minutes.

New Task for Madge.

"Then I shall return here, for I wish to outline something most important which I wish you to do this afternoon. When I come back, and before I tell you what I wish of you, I shall be glad to listen to whatever else you have to tell me."

With his hand on the doorknob he turned back to me.

"One thing I can tell you now," he said. "The task I have for you involves quite a long motor journey this afternoon, and it may be that you will have to stay away over night, although I do not consider that a probability.

"But it is a possibility, so you would better prepare for it immediately. Then you will not have to be delayed when I come back and tell you what it is I want."

Mingled Emotions.

He went out, and as they say in the old style melodramatic novels, I was "a prey to mingled emotions." Curiosity, anxiety, even a touch of vague fear had their way with me, as I hastened through my simple preparations for a motor journey.

I quickly repacked my two small bags and set them near the door. Then I washed my hands, touched up my simple make-up and rearranged my hair, finishing everything a full two minutes before my father's knock again sounded on the door.

His keen eyes took in the freshening I have given my toilet and my packed bags standing near the door, and he gave me an approving nod.

"I see you are all ready for your journey," he said. "That is fine! Now, suppose you tell me what is on your mind."

"These are two things," I said. "The first is that Ronald's roommate, Bob, has been told to telephone him here this afternoon, calling me and reversing the charges. You remember you wished him to camouflage Ronald's absence from college, so that his parents will suspect nothing. You said that you would arrange matters with the college authorities."

"I already have despatched a special delivery letter to the dean, explaining everything," he said. "As to Bob—" he stopped, considered a moment, then made a decision—"I will arrange with the operator to have the call put in here, and if it does not come before you leave, I will stay in the apartment here, if I may, until it does come. I do not wish any ringing of bells in my apartment where Ronald is sleeping, although it is my opinion that Gabriel's trumpet would have a hard time reaching him."

He sat down in the chair and looked expectantly at me.

"Now for the second thing," he said.

Shows Fan Letter.

For answer I put Olina's fan letter and the accompanying water color painting into his hands, explaining that Olina had brought them to me as a camouflage reason for coming into my apartment while Redfield was there, but that we were both puzzled and intrigued by the lines from Loch Lomond in the reversed scroll of music, and the messages I had found in the body of the painting.

"You did not tell Olina that you recognized the gate of The Larches," he asked, "or the dotted line leading from the aeroplane to the gate?"

"No, but I pointed both things out to her mother," I said.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

GET THE RIGHT PARTNER

If you are going to try hipperdipper stuff during the bidding, you had better provide yourself with a partner who has understanding, or you will take some terrific bumps. When you unleash a series of phychic bids before showing your real suit, for the purpose of luring a double from the opponents, the greatest risk is not what they will do to you, but what your partner will. Certain pyrotechnics may be attempted with one player opposite you which would be suicidal across from others.

South at this duplicate table was a player who likes to cut didoes, in straining for top scores, Godfrey B. Moore, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and his partner was Miss Mabel Erickson, now a New Yorker, who learned to be canny when competing against the tricky crew in and about Philadelphia when she lived in Atlantic City until recently.

After West's double, she decided it was impossible for her, or anyone in her seat, to figure out just what had caused the queersounding sequence of bids from her partner. Since West had doubled, the bidding would be certain to go around to her partner and allow him to make for the side the choice of moves. This she felt she could safely do, since she had told the approximate truth with her own bids, and he therefore was in position to know the whole story. Naturally she strongly suspected a long spade suit, and as it turned out she was right.

The club K was led by West. This was won by the A. Three hearts furnished club discards, and thereafter it was impossible to lose anything but one diamond and two spades. Pretty lucky, at that, to find the club A and be able to get those immediate discards on hearts.

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

If West leads the diamond 8 against South's 4-Spades on this deal, dummy playing low, what principle of defense should govern East's action?

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, Feb. 26.

Rather mediocre stellar operations point to a routine day, with affairs moving in customary grooves. The general trend of the attainment of pleasure, or whatever caters to the ease and gratification of life, with little inciting ambitions in either directons. In this easy way there is danger of extravagance and overdoing, with careless or lavish hand leading to future regret. Try to spur the ambitions into more practical or lucrative fields.

Those whose birthday it is may find the year beset with urges to the pursuit of pleasure, rather than into channels of creative, practical and lucrative returns. The lure to extravagance, over-indulgence and excesses may have reactions of regret and inability to make ends meet.

A child born on this day will be disposed to take life as it comes, with inclinations and instincts bent upon the pursuit of pleasure. Its substance may come easy and go easy unless it is given early lessons in thrift.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Well, well, well. Look what it says here in Spiv Harris' Sports Scraps in the Mt. Vernon News. Quote:

If, during the next few years, Mansfield becomes recognized as the schoolboy sports capital of northern Ohio, don't say we didn't predict it.

Harry Mehock's famous Mansfield Relays, now temporarily discontinued, elevated Mansfield to the top as a scholastic track and field stronghold a dozen years ago. Football has always been a Mansfield specialty and now that Massillon is on the verge of dropping that sport, Tyger elevens will get more recognition than ever. And with Coach Vern Hoffman and Sportswriter Rex Hess inspiring a basketball comeback, Mansfield right now boasts one of the state's top-ranking quintets.

When Paul Snyder and Hoffman were hired at Mansfield in 1938 both were promised a junior high athletic program patterned after the systems made famous by Massillon and Newark. Snyder "delivered" last fall when his gridders tied Massillon and Hoffman is proving his worth by flooring a cage team which gets better in every performance. Hess has aided no little bit by giving the cage sport more publicity and acclaim than it ever before received in Mansfield.

With the well-organized junior high athletic system to draw from, Mansfield high teams should continue to produce triumphs in all sports for several years. After all, Mansfield is considerably larger than most of its one-school rival cities and can train more boys to become top-notch athletes.

Unquote.

Thank you, Spiv, for those kind words. I thank you. Vern Hoffman thanks you. Paul Snyder thanks you. Harry Mehock thanks you. That warm little vagrant breeze you may have felt down there today in Knox county was stirred up, no doubt, by the violent bows the four of us were taking in your direction.

Record publicity for the Tygers?

That all depends, Spiv, on where you sit, and from what angle you view the situation. Now you're an astute, and unbiased reader, so I'm going to take your word for it that the publicity the Tygers have been getting does set something of a record.

But would you believe it when I tell you that I have heard moans from some sectors that the Tygers don't get enough publicity?

* * *

That occurred chiefly at a time when the Tygers were playing three straight weeks on the road, and there was no particular reason for drumming up a crowd to walk out to the high school and sit in an empty gym.

During that time I'm informed that one unposted pupil posed this quaint but querulous question during session of the Mansfield high school student council:

"Why does football get so much more publicity than basketball?"

* * *

To the teacher who relayed that one to me, I replied: "It shouldn't take any great acumen on your part to figure out the answer to that. Go out and count the crowd at football and basketball games, then figure out which comes first in importance."

Pastor Surprises Franklin

Boxing Beauty Beats Down Lammin' Lem.

By JACK CUDDY

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Bob Pastor, New York's mercurial mauler, is back on the heavyweight heights today. Officially recognized as the world's No. 2 contender by virtue of his brilliant knockout victory over Cleveland's coffee-colored kayo artist, Lem Franklin.

Fred Sady of Milwaukee, chairman of the National Boxing association's rating committee, announced the No. 2 designation right after the 10-count ended over Franklin in the eighth round last night before a crowd of 13,278 fans in the Arena—a record indoor Cleveland sports crowd that established a new indoor gate figure of $52,457.

Only Billy Conn now stands between black-haired, fair-skinned Pastor and a third tilt with Champion Joe Louis because of Bob's grand performance in which he not only upset the 13-5 betting odds but actually belted out the big, broad-shouldered Negro who was supposed to flatten Pastor in an early round.

* * *

It was the first full-count kayo ever registered against Franklin, who outweighed the New York veteran 197½ pounds to 181, and who entered the ring riding a string of 19 straight victories, including 17 kayoes.

Referee Joe Sedley counted out Franklin at 2:08 of the eighth round after Pastor had given a memorable demonstration of the superiority of boxing skill over the sheer power of a slugger.

Franklin, who had knocked out Tony Musto and big Abe Simon in less time than it took Joe Louis, seemed destined to turn the same trick on Pastor in the first two rounds when he exploded thundering punches on the smaller man's head and body. He had Bobbing Bob in such trouble several times that Pastor's manager, little Jimmy Johnston, was screaming from beneath the corner, "Keep moving Bob—keep moving." And Bob kept moving—frantically, like a distraught mongoose—with flying feet and flickering body.

Pastor went to the canvas once in the second round. It wasn't a full-fledged knockdown because Bob slipped before dropping to one knee while bouncing away from a hard right smash to the heart. Bob also suffered a gashed left eye in that frame.

Pastor, who had gone 21 rounds with Louis, again displayed his remarkable recuperative powers and then took command in the third which he never relinquished. By this time he had studied Franklin's awkward maneuvers and learned the big fellow's weaknesses. So he went about giving 'Lammin' Lem a boxing lesson. He had Franklin missing like a drunken dive bomber, meanwhile smothering exasperated Lem with jolting leather.

Pastor's killing pace and body blows had Franklin slowed to a walk in the fifth, and the New York veteran—sensing certain victory—was winking over the Negro's shoulder to Manager Johnston in the clinches. Franklin rallied desperately in the sixth, though he lost the round. That was his last stand. Busy Bob barraged him unmercifully in the seventh and continued the attack in the eighth. In the latter session, a left hook to the jaw buckled Franklin's knees. Then Pastor forced him into the ropes and rained leather to the head, until a hard right hook brought Lem lurching off the ropes into a nose dive to the canvas. He lay stretched out on the canvas, half supported by his elbows; then staggered to his feet just after the count of 10 had been reached.

Referee Sedley forgot to mark his slip "knockout," and one of the two judges wrote "technical knockout" on his slip. Thereupon the announcer called out that Pastor had won on a "technical knockout," but this soon was corrected by the referee, and another announcement was made.

Pastor and Manager Johnston are gunning now for another title fight with Louis or a return brawl with Billy Conn, who scored a technical knockout victory over Pastor some time ago—which Pastor insisted resulted from Conn's repeated fouling.

KNOX KNOCKED OUT IN FIRST ROUND

NEW YORK — (AP) — Buddy Knox, Columbus, O., heavyweight, lasted but one round of his scheduled 10-frame fight with Tami Mauriello at the Bronx Coliseum last night.

The New Yorker won by a technical knockout when the Ohioan was unable to come out for the second after going down at the end of the first. Mauriello weighed 184, Knox 193½.

Mid-A Gives Up On Adding Lima

EBENSBURG, Pa.—(U.P.)—President Elmer Daily of the Mid-Atlantic baseball league admitted today it was "doubtful" if an eighth club could be found to round out an eight-team circuit for the league in 1942.

* * *

"We have some possibilities but they all look remote," Daily said as the deadline approached for inclusion of another team or dropping one of the present seven clubs.

Daily said he will have a definite decision on the matter tomorrow. If no replacement for the retiring Akron club is found, the other seven club owners will vote within four or five days on which city will be dropped. Lima had been invited to join the league.

If a "hot" prospect should be unearthed at the last minute, Daily said he will ask the league to extend the Feb. 25 deadline. "I am holding out until the last minute, hoping we'll get another team," he asserted.

Rollie turned and asked: "Did you see it?"

"No," the umps admitted, "but it sounded just as straight and true as a die."

ROUND INTO SHAPE

TAMPA, Fla.—(AP)—Despite the wind and adverse weather, the Cincinnati Reds are rounding into shape on schedule but what's really making the Rookies hustle is the presence of Jewel Ens, manager of the Reds' farm club at Syracuse. Enis is looking for players and the freshmen would like to show up so well that Manager Bill McKechnie will tell the farm boss "hands off."

Leaders Take Close Games

Cap and Mounts Each Spurt to 2-Point Wins.

(By Associated Press)

Mt. Union and Capital still were deadlocked for the Ohio conference basketball championship today.

Only an upset victory by Kenyon, which plays the Mounts Friday night, can give the Lutherans the league title.

Both title contenders spurted in the closing minutes of play last night to eke out two-point margins of victory and run their record of wins to 12 each as against one loss.

Capital edged Ohio Northern, 53 to 51, at Columbus, while Mt. Union took a 47-45 thriller that saw the score tied seven times at Oberlin.

Kenyon's cagers gave the home fans a 52 to 46 win over Denison, but they are not expected to bowl over the Mounts Friday and the Purple Raiders seem headed for their second successive conference title.

A One-hander from the side court by Lutheran forward Bob Kalish provided the margin of victory for Cap in a game which saw Cap center Bob Geist drop half a dozen field goals and the same number of charity shots to run his season scoring mark to 241, a new individual record at the school.

Bowling Green pushed over Heidelberg 32 to 27 after leading at the half 11 to 9 in a closely guarded tilt.

In other Ohio conference clashes Muskingum defeated Findlay 58-49 after trailing 22-23 at the half, and Findlay defeated Marietta, 63-53.

Wayne university came from Michigan to defeat Akron 41-40 after trailing at the half 19-29.

The Wooster Scots scored their 17th victory of the season at Hiram, 59-38. The Scots led 37-16 at the half.

* * *

In another one-point thriller Ohio university beat Xavier 43-42. Xavier led at the half time mark 24-19.

Tri-State of Angola, Ind., ended its basketball season at home with a 59 to 33 victory over Bluffton.

Bellville-Butler Tilt Opens County Joust

Four Games Scheduled Tomorrow Night At Mansfield High Gym

THE Richland county Class B cage tournament will get under way tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in the Mansfield Senior high school gymnasium with Bellville meeting Butler in the opening match.

By BUD SPRUNGER, News-Journal Sports Writer.

Other matchings in the first round pit Lexington against Union at 8:30 p. m., Lucas against Plymouth at 9:30 p. m. and Shiloh against Ontario at 10:30 p. m.

On Saturday at 1:30 p. m. the winner of the Bellville-Butler game will meet the winner of the Lexington-Union match and at 2:30 p. m. the winner of the Lucas-Plymouth fracas takes on the winner of the Shiloh-Ontario battle.

* * *

Following these, the finals will be held at 9:30 p. m., Saturday, with a consolation prize going to the winner of a game between the two semi-final losers. This game will be played at 8:30 p. m.

Butler's Bulldogs stand odds on favorites to defend their crown for another year having finished the regular league race on top of the pile.

Only game the Bulldogs lost was to Lucas in the last round.

Standings at the close of the race found:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Butler	7	1	.875
Plymouth	6	2	.750
Bellville	4	4	.500
Lucas	4	4	.500
Lexington	4	4	.500
Union	3	5	.375
Shiloh	1	7	.125
Ontario	1	7	.125

When Bellville and Butler met during the season the Bulldogs downed the Jays twice, once in a league game, Jan. 9, by a 37-29 score and once in a non-loop tilt, Dec. 16, 37-21.

* * *

Union defeated Lexington when they met before, 37-30, on Jan. 30, while Plymouth trimmed the Butler-beating Lucas club, 23-18, on Dec. 19 and Shiloh downed Ontario, 23-16.

* * *

Although one referee is yet to be obtained, Willard S. Weekley, tournament manager and superintendent of the Butler schools, announced these officials yesterday:

Dean Schuler, referee, Lucasville; Leland Gilliland, scorekeeper, Lucas, and Foster Lariber, timekeeper, Butler.

High scorer for the season's play is Bill Reed of Plymouth who last Friday edged out George Stoodt of Bellville by caging 23 points in one game. During the year he accounted for 118 points in loop play while Stoodt ended with 110 tallies.

Others high scorers are Ray Clever, Lexington, 74 points; Bill Ritchie, Lexington, 66; Jack Hammett, Union, 65; Al James, Shiloh, 62; Elwin Harris, Butler, 61; H. Russell, Shiloh, 55; Jack Elliott, Ontario, 53; Bob Barger, Lucas, 51; Hahn, Union, 47; Junior Pritchard, Butler, 46; Dick Rule, Plymouth, 45; Dwain Forbes, Butler, 43.

Drawing power of the tournament at Mansfield without Madison supplying its usual large share of the crowd will be tested in the week-end classic. Madison, moving into Class A, will play this spring in the district "A" tournament at Sandusky.

SARASOTA, Fla. —(AP)—Frank Shellenbach, Red Sox coach, thinks the rubber shortage will be a blessing in disguise for pitchers. He believes that baseballs will stay in the game longer and that the moundsmen "will be able to throw the long-banned emery ball without using any gimmicks."

Says Modern Boxers Soft

Look Like Gentlemen, Moans Bat Levinsky.

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Battling Levinsky, the old light-heavyweight champion who loafed through 1914 by meeting 56 ring foes, says there's nothing the matter with present-day pugilism that rougher, tougher and meaner fighting men won't cure.

"Boxers today don't look their part," Levinsky complained, a little sadly. "They dress like gentlemen, talk only the best English, read Shakespeare and look like bankers.

"I think the ring game would be better off with some big, rough-house guys, the likes of Gunboat Smith, Harry Greb, Bob Fitzsimmons, Bill Brenan and Jack Dempsey.

"Of course, now, you can't say Joe Louis isn't rough house already. He's a great fighter . . . but the rest of 'em . . . softies."

The battler, now 51 and a shipyard steel worker, clouted his way through 350 fights from 1907 to 1926 and picked up close to $500,000 along the way. Most of it went into real estate, he says, and disappeared during the depression.

He won the American light-heavy title from Jack Dillon at Boston in 1916 and lost it to Gene Tunney at New York in 1922.

"Dillon was the hardest puncher and greatest fighter I met," said Levinsky. "Although I took some hard knocks from Dempsey, Greb and Brennan, too. Tunney was the cleverest and most scientific fighter. He had everything figured out in advance.

Bat admits he might be prejudiced about Dillon—he fought him 10 times.

Levinsky—his first name is Barney—didn't get into the big money until he hooked up with "Dumb Dan" Morgan as manager.

Morgan, who was anything but dumb, used Bat in nine fights in January of busy 1914. In March, 1916, he sent him to the post 11 times, six of them in one week.

* * *

"You know," said the Battler, "if it had been legal to fight on Sunday, I believe Morgan would have found still more work for me."

Bob Bierie Rolls High Tappan Score

Bob Bieri paced the Tappan Stove keglers last night at Colony alleys with a 591 total on games of 174-194-213. S. Streitmater rolled high game of 217.

N. Y. U. RETIRES FROM GRID COMPETITION

NEW YORK —(AP)— New York university's 69-year-record of intercollegiate football competition —during which the nation's largest school rose to gridiron glory and then slumped to dull mediocrity—was a thing of cold records and tattered clippings today.

The school's athletic council voted yesterday after an argumentive two-hour session to abondon the sport. Reasons were decreased enrollment—NYU has 35,000 students—and subsequent loss of student fees, poor records in recent years and dwindling gate receipts which caused a $65,000

Cincy Reds Take Chance on Untested Rookie at Third

(Wide World Features)

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — It's not often that a major league club sells an established star to make room for an untested rookie.

But that is just what the Cincinnati Reds did when they peddled Bill Werber to the Giants so that Bert Haas, sensational rookie from the Columbus, O., club of the American Association could take over at third base.

Manager Bill McKechnie said Charley Grimm, Minneapolis pilot, told him last summer "Haas is the best big league prospect in our league." Taking the hint, McKechnie made several trips to American Association cities near Cincinnati to scout Haas personally.

"He impressed me very much," the Reds manager said. "He fielded well and hit hard. When I saw him, Columbus had lost six straight games and Haas pulled the club out of its slump with his good play."

So the Reds purchased Haas from the Cardinals, who operate the Columbus club. Then they sold Werber, and McKechnie announced Haas would be the Reds' third sacker in 1942.

Haas, whose full first name is Berthold, has been on the verge of becoming a major leaguer for three years. He hit .337 for Nashville in the Southern Association in 1938 and went to spring training with the Dodgers as a first baseman. The Dodgers sent him back to the minors—to Montreal, from where he returned to Nashville to hit .365.

Still a first baseman, he received another trial with the Dodgers in 1940. He almost made it that time. Dolph Camilli was a holdout and Larry McPhail declared. "If Camilli doesn't sign in a hurry, Haas will be Brooklyn's first baseman this year."

Camilli signed and Haas went back to Montreal. In mid-season he was traded to the Cardinals in the real that sent Joe Medwick to Flatbush. By this time, he was a third baseman. But the Cards already had a good third sacker in the person of Jimmy Brown, so Bert wound up with the Columbus farm club.

At Columbus, Haas was something of a sensation. He played in every inning of Columbus' 156 games. He hit .315, and accounted for 37 doubles, 12 triples and 15 home runs. He topped the league batting in runs, with 131.

* * *

Pie Traynor, former Pirate manager, said "Haas will hit .300 or better in the majors." Bill Brandt, National league publicity director, tabbed him as the outstanding rookie third baseman scheduled to receive a National league tryout this spring. Bill McKechnie said his with cash, and Cincinnati now owns Haas.

BERT HAAS

Thus Haas finds himself practically assured of a regular job with the Reds without ever having pulled on a Cincinnati uniform.

WE WISH to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our kind friends and neighbors during our recent bereavement in the loss of our beloved wife and mother. We especially thank the Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger for his kind words of consolation, and the Wappner Funeral Home for their excellent assistance in our time of sorrow.
Charles Carlson & Family. (S-25)

WITH sentiments of deep gratitude we wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and sincere appreciation to our many friends, relatives, and neighbors for their numerous acts of kindness, and beautiful floral tributes in the loss of our dear Mother. Special thanks to Rev. A. L. Linder, the Wappner Funeral Home and all who in any way tended to less our sorrow.
Mr. Fred Thierlein. (S-25)

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

FILL YOUR COAL BIN

Here's Three Good Reasons Why:

1. We May Expect Defense Industries To Be Given Preference In Coal and Transportation.
2. At This Time There Is a Surplus of Coal and Cars, and Because of This, Prices Are Low.
3. Rubber and Tires—Are Being Rationed—Oil and Gas May Soon Follow.

Be Wise—Prepare For the Future!

U-BOATS HALT STOCK SWING TO RECOVERY

News of Further Sinkings of Tankers Discourages Market Traders.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks were unable today to renew yesterday's moderate recovery swing, but a scattering of issues bettered their levels and most of the recorded losses were narrow.

Buying interest was held in check by announcement of further enemy attacks on tankers on the east coast and reports from Los Angeles which told of anti-aircraft firing at an unidentified airship seen over the southern California coast.

Stocks given mild support included Douglas, United Aircraft, American Smelting, International Nickel, N. Y. Central and Great Northern. Inclined to slip were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and General Motors.

Investment analysts foresaw possibilities of a great new volume of corporate financing in connection with the disclosure that Chrysler Corp. was negotiating for a $100,000,000 line of credit with banks.

The need for extensive additional working capital was said to be general among corporations holding contracts for war products and, while Chrysler has arranged to cover requirements through bank loans, many other companies, it was believed, might augment working funds through the sale of new securities under reasonably favorable market conditions.

Igorot Warriors Praised by Gen. MacArthur

Here is a group of typical Igorot warriors of the Philippines. They've become some of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's finest soldiers. In a recent bloody battle the Igorots rode on top of the American tanks, guiding them through the jungle to where they could best operate in wiping out the Twentieth Japanese regiment Spears which are shown in this photo have not given way to modern rifles and machine guns.

3 IN COURT IN SCHOOL SCRAP

Butler, Worthington Township Trio Pleads Innocent To Assault Charges.

layed filing charges because he was "undecided about what action, it any, should be taken." He added that "we decided to bring the action to show the people we are going to have law and order in this community."

Neither Morgan nor Roberts appeared in court this morning and there were no Butler residents in the courtroom. Both Morgan and Roberts signed warrants against Tugend. Roberts also filed a charge against Raymond Stevens and Morgan accused Archie Stevens in a separate charge.

The warrants were served about 8:30 p. m. yesterday by Sheriff Frank E. Robinson and Deputy J. R. Hetler. The three defendants came to the county jail voluntarily before the hearing this morning, but none of them was imprisoned.

Morgan said the Butler board had taken no further action today in the case involving Supt. Weekley and had arranged no hearing of the "misconduct" charges which resulted in the suspension of the superintendent.

The suspension was lifted two weeks ago to permit Weekley to continue as head of the school after nearly 200 parents and pupils came to Mansfield while the Butler board was meeting here to ask that the superintendent be reinstated.

Tugend and the Stevens brothers said today they favored permitting Weekley to continue as superintendent and added that they have backed him during the school dispute.

200 FACE EARLY CALL TO ARMY

Two-Thirds of 300 Sent To Columbus Pass Physicals, Boards Informed.

ination will be effective as soon as instructions now in the mails reach the local boards.

Previously, men classified by their local board as acceptable for service have been given their army physical examinations about 10 days before they received orders to report for induction.

Officials said registrants who have passed the army physical examinations under the old procedure but have not yet been inducted probably would receive inductions orders before their local boards changed over to the new system. The mechanics of the shift to the new procedure, and the time necessary to accomplish it, are matters for the boards to determine in the light of local conditions, they said.

Announcing the new procedure yesterday, the selective service officials said the war department assured them that in cases where immediate induction would cause undue hardship, the draftee would be given an immediate furlough to wind up his civilian affairs.
